THOUSANDS IN TEMPLE HAIL KENNY AS MAYOR

Democrats, Republicans and Progressives Unite in Biggest Rally of Campaign for the South Boston Candidate

Higginson, Frothingham, Leahy and Connolly Plead Eloquently to Save Boston's Good Name; Kenny Is Cheered 5 Minutes

FOUR thousand cheering men and women—Republicans, Progressives, Democrats, but most of all Bostonians—elected Thomas J. Kenny Mayor of Boston, in Tremont Temple, last night, and took a solemn pledge to do it again on Tuesday.

The Temple rally in the interest of Mr. Kenny was the biggest thing in the campaign, up to date. It brought out the Great Silent Vote, which, having ventured forth, lined up en masse in defence of the good name of Boston.

Joseph A. Dennison was the presiding officer. The speakers included Major Henry Lee Higginson, Richard E. Teeling, John P. Leahy, James B. Connolly, former Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham, Candidate Kenny, cheered by a multitude for nearly five minutes, and former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell.

These were able speakers enough to make any rally big, but not so able as to overshadow the fact that the immense audience was in the main Republican, and for the rest (mostly) Progressive.

This was Boston's eleventh-hour answer to the campaign of brag and bluster.

BIG REPUBLICAN VOTE.

Politicians came to the Temple, looked in, studied the sober-faced thousands, noted their splendid endorsement of the sentiments uttered by Higginson and Leahy, shook their heads and went away.

Give Mr. Kenny any proportion you will of the Democratic vote of Boston, and pile upon that Democratic vote the Republican and Progressive support plainly forestadowed by the Tremont Temple gathering, and nothing can keep Mr. Kenny out of the Mayor's chair by a plurality from 10,000 up. This was the judgment last night of some of Boston's shrewdest judges of things political.

The Temple speeches were all of them good enough to be preserved within the covers of a book.

But the feature of the night was the audience.

It came early. It remained late. It overflowed onto the stairways, and into the streets, and around into Bosworth place, where an overflow meeting was held on the coldest night of the New Year.

HOUSED BY CIVIC CRISIS.

The first balcony had been reserved for ladies and their escorts. The women were out in force. Sometimes they led in the cheering. They applauded every reference to Mr. Kenny's eight years of work for the public schools of Boston.

It was not a rally-going audience. These were the Stay-at-Homes, who never are brought out except by a municipal crisis. Their presence indicated that when Boston is threatened with a Curley for Mayor, Boston and her institutions are face to face with a crisis.

The Temple doors were open at 7 o'clock. The floors, the balconies and the gallery filled rapidly. At 8 o'clock every seat was taken. After that it was standing room only. At 8:30 o'clock the people began clamoring for an additional meeting.

Occupying seats of honor on the speakers' platform were men of prominence, like J. Payson Bradley, Oliver Ames, Raymond P. Delano, Philip J. Sears, Benjamin C. Lane, William S. Kenney, Joseph Lee, the "father of the playground," David F. Tilley, C. P. Curtis, Pierce L. McCarthy, Walter Bellantyne, Dr. Carl A. Lindquist, James E. Carroll, John T. Kennedy,

Betting Is Even on Mayoralty Result

E. P. Clark, However, Puts $3,500 on Kenny at 10 to 8.

With the lightest anti-election betting in years, Thomas J. Kenny and James M. Curley were placed on even terms by the "professional" political book makers last night.

Enthusiastic Kenny men, however, disregarded this and were ready to give odds on their candidate. In some sections, Curley men took the same stand. The bets made were largely matters of sentiment, rather than that of "business."

Edward P. Clark was one of the big bettors. He wagered $3,500 at ten to eight on Mr. Kenny.

There is much betting on how the different wards will go—these bets centering upon the South Boston wards.

U. S. Women Ill-Bred, Says Mlle. Polaire

Calls Them "Painful Imitations of French Models."

PARIS, Jan. 10.—"American women are ill-mannered and ill-bred," said Mlle. Polaire in a signed article published today in which she gives her impressions of America. She says:

"I met women in American drawing rooms who were so timid that they could not say a word in my presence, and I was startled to see one of them produce a tape measure and attempt to measure my waist.

"Despite the fine clothes of American women they are almost always painful imitations of French models."

TAMMANY DEAD, IN NAME ONLY: CURLEY KILLS IT

Followers Dazed as He Tells 'Em It's the "Pro Bono Publico" Club Now.

"PRO BUNCO PUBLICO," EH?

The polecat of Boston politics died last night.

Congressman Curley killed it. He publicly knocked on the head the name "Tammany Club," the title of his own pet political organization in Ward 17, and then tried to cover up the odor of the old name by giving the club a new and more gaudy one.

The new name of the old Tammany Club—and Curley told this last night in Symphony Hall in all seriousness—is the "Pro Bono Publico" Club.

The humor of the thing got by most of the audience for two reasons.

Most of the Curleyites thought the name suited to the club.

Those who didn't think so weren't quite sure whether "Pro Bono Publico" is one of those Mexican generals or a new kind of drink.

So they were feazed by the new title, as it rolled from Curley's lips.

Those who know what the new name means thought that Curley was overdoing things a bit in coupling such a fine old phrase with his political gang.

It was only Friday that the AMERICAN called editorial attention to the significance of the name "Tammany" and the character of the Tammany Tiger in New York, of which the Curley organization is a miserable imitation, aping all the weak points, with none of the power of the Manhattan band.

The haste with which Curley changed the name of his club—hurriedly making the title he invented when he founded the organization—was almost ludicrous.

In his search for a high-sounding title Curley unfortunately chose a name that few of his heelers understood, as shown last night by the puzzled looks that warped some of his hearers' faces when they heard the unfamiliar title: "Pro Bono Publico."

When the new name was borne down town by the crowd of political followers who came out from the rally in Symphony Hall there was considerable jeering at the latest Curley stunt.

The latest word of the new name was a happy suggestion that what Curley ought to have said and what the notorious Tammany Club will doubtless be called now is:

"PRO BUNCO PUBLICO" CLUB.

Stork Interrupts Scannell's Speech

School Board Candidate Breaks Record for Brevity at Rally

Electioneering isn't in it when it's a question of a visit from Mr. Stork. The proof came last night just as Dr. David D. Scannell, the Public School Association's candidate for school committeeman, arrived at the Harvard Improvement Association building in Dorchester for a campaign speech.

He got up on the rostrum to speak.

"Say, doctor, there's a telephone message for you saying one of your patients is about to be visited by the stork," someone called out.

Then Dr. Scannell made a speech that broke all records for brevity. He said just ten words—and it was his final campaign gun.

"Judge me by my three years' service on the School Board," he said, and hurried out to race Mr. Stork to the patient's home.

GIRL ARRESTED IN NEW BEDFORD BARGE TRAGEDY

Flora Therrien Held After Father Tells Varying Stories of Finding Girl's Body.

CAPTAIN MATRONY ACCUSED

NEW BEDFORD, Jan. 10.—Flora Therrien, daughter of Louis Therrien, who came with her father to notify the police that the headless body of murdered Annie Walsh lay in a coal barge on the waterfront here, was arrested on a technical charge today, after being closely questioned at police headquarters.

Charles Matrony, captain of the barge, is charged with the murder of the girl. Louis Therrien is held as a material witness, and his daughter's arrest brings the total of persons taken into custody following the murder to three.

Flora Therrien is not believed to have any direct connection with the case. Louis Therrien, her father, was a most intimate friend of the murdered girl. This amazing discovery served today to tremendously increase the mystery about what had first seemed to be a perfectly clear case against Matrony.

THERRIEN IS HELD.

Louis Therrien is held under bonds. It was stated today, however, that if he by any chance raises the amount of his bond and seeks release he will be rearrested on a serious charge.

The known facts of the murder are these:

In the hours shortly after midnight this morning, Louis Therrien and his daughter Flora came to the police station with word that a murdered girl was in the coal barge now on the waterfront.

The police questioned the two—let the girl go home, but held Therrien. This was his story, as he told it then:

"I went to the barge, looking for a job. There was a light in the window of the cabin. I looked in and saw a girl's body all cut to pieces. Then I hurried to tell the police."

Officers hurried to the barge. In the cabin on the east side of the barge, lying in a bunk, they found the decapitated body of the girl. It was horribly mutilated. In the silence that fell upon them at the ghastly discovery, they heard the sounds of groans from the next cabin.

ROPE AROUND HIS NECK.

In one corner, moaning, was the captain of the tug, Charles Matrony.

About his neck was a short rope—and the end of the rope was in his hand.

The police immediately began their investigation. They discovered almost at once that Louis Therrien, Captain Matrony and the murdered girl—who was identified as Annie Walsh, an orphan—had been together in a cafe in the early evening.

This tended to discredit Therrien's first story. Captain Matrony was dazed, either from liquor or from some shock, and was unable to tell any story, but Therrien was again questioned.

This time he admitted being in the cafe with Matrony, the murdered girl and another woman.

"When we started for the barge," he said, "this other woman said Try land was good enough for her,' and refused to go.

"On the barge I went into the west cabin, locked the doors so no one could rob me and went to sleep. I had been drinking.

WENT HOME FIRST.

"I awoke half an hour later. There was no sound in the other cabin, so I called to Captain Matrony. He didn't answer. I got up and looked in the cabin and saw the girl dead in the bunk.

"I left the barge and went home. I told my wife Flora, about it. She came with me to the station."

He could not explain why he went to his home before going to the police. would not name the other woman who had been in the party.

MME. NORDICA CRITICALLY ILL

Famous Opera Star Is Stricken After Hardship on Wrecked Steamship.

Friends and admirers throughout New England of Madame Lillian Nordica, the famous prima donna, heard with alarm last night the report by cable from Brisbane, Australia, that the great diva is critically ill with pneumonia resulting from exposure when the Dutch liner Tasman, on which she was a passenger, went ashore in the Gulf of Papua, two weeks ago.

The cablegram came from Brisbane to the singer's husband, George W. Young, a New York banker. The news is of particular interest to New England, as Madame Nordica was born in Maine.

The last word the public had heard from Madame Nordica was on New Year's Eve, when she cabled her husband that the Tasman was proceeding to a nearby port for repairs. It is believed that the singer was stricken several days later following her exciting experiences when the liner was nearly wrecked on a reef. The cable doesn't state just where she is, but it is thought she may be in a Brisbane hospital.

The illness comes as an interruption to the diva's around-the-world concert tour.

Commission Named by Judge Aldrich Concludes Work in Boston Conference and Files Report with Clerk of U. S. Court

Friends of Harry K. Thaw felt sure last night that the decision of the Thaw Sanity Commission, made in Boston yesterday for submission to Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States District Court at Concord, N. H., is in favor of freeing the "Man from Matteawan" on bail.

Thaw went to bed as happy as a schoolboy. Before he retired he told friends, "I've heard favorable news."

This significant announcement followed a conference which Thaw had with his senior counsel, Judge William M. Chase. Judge Chase arrived at 8:30 p. m. Counsel and client were closeted some time. When Judge Chase departed he did not attempt to conceal his optimism.

It was whispered in the lobby of the Eagle House that he had conversed cheering news to Thaw about the finding of the Sanity Board, which is to be made public at 9 o'clock today.

Thaw says that he will remain in Concord until the courts have settled his case and that he will spend much of his time snowshoeing in the White Mountains. He says he never felt better in his life. He takes long hikes every day.

PERSISTENT RUMORS.

Clerk Hodgman of the United States District Court said at 11.15 p. m. that the report of the commission had not been filed but would be before midnight.

General Frank S. Streeter and Dr Charles P. Bancroft of the commission returned to Concord late yesterday, bearing copy of their decision to be filed with the clerk of Judge Aldrich's court.

Although nothing could be learned from the members of the commission, they being mutually pledged to secrecy, there was a persistent and generally accepted report in Concord that the recommendation of the commission is favorable to Thaw's petition for release on bail.

Nathaniel E. Martin of Concord, one of the Thaw counsel, said:

"We expect a favorable report. Bail will probably not be over $1,000, because all the other men in New York who were indicted on the same

Report Anna Gould Wins at the Vatican

Pope Expected to Pass on Decision in Marital Case Tomorrow.

ROME, Jan. 10.—According to the latest report of today's session of the Segnatura Tribunal, the appeal of Duchess de Talleyrand (Anna Gould), asking that the decision of the Rota tribunal annulling her marriage to her first husband, Count Boni de Castellane, be set aside, was virtually sustained.

Final decision of the question has been left to Pope Pius. The matter will be submitted to him on Monday. The decision will probably be made public on Tuesday.

Today's hearing was characterized by a warm discussion between Cardinals Gasparri and Vannutelli, the former upholding the court's claim that Duchess Anna had received the proper citation to appear and defend the suit, but had refused to read it. Cardinal Vannutelli, who presided, was inclined to accept the statement of the Duchess that she had not received the citation said to have been delivered through the Archbishop of Paris.

It is expected that Pope Pius will uphold Cardinal Vannutelli.

NEW HAVEN YIELDS: TO DIVORCE ITS ALLIES

Railroad to Give Up Boston & Maine, Ocean Steamship Lines and Trolleys; Fate of Sound Lines Settled by Panama Act

Chairman Elliott Announces an Agreement With Department of Justice by Which Company Surrenders to All Demands

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—An agreement has been reached between the Department of Justice and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. This was announced late this afternoon by Chairman Elliott of the New Haven.

Under the declared agreement the New Haven makes practically a complete and unconditional surrender to Attorney-General McReynolds.

The agreement specifically provides:

The absolute divesting of the Boston & Maine from the New Haven Railroad.

The giving up by the New Haven of its various trolley systems in Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

The surrender of these steamship interests: The Merchants & Miners' Transportation Company, the Eastern Steamship Corporation and the Maine Steamship Company.

The cancellation of the Boston & Albany agreement.

As to the other steamship interests, notably the Sound lines—the subject of contention in the long controversy between the Attorney-General and the New Haven authorities—the fate of these, so far as control by the New Haven goes, lies with the Interstate Commerce Commission. That commission will determine under the Panama Canal Act whether or not the New Haven must give up either class.

BIG EQUITY IS GIVEN.

The agreement, which is verbal so far, marks the absolute abandonment by the government's attempt right to dissolve the New England transportation system. The full text of the settlement is outlined in the following statement given out by Chairman Elliott and Dr. Henry President of Yale and a director of the New Haven road:

The New Haven, in addition to the cancellation of the Boston & Albany agreement which becomes effective February 1, will dispose of its holdings in the Boston & Maine Railroad, the various trolley systems, the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company, the Eastern Steamship Corporation and the Maine Steamship Company under a plan, the details of which will be worked out as promptly as possible with representatives of the Department of Justice, by Chairman Elliott, Moorfield Storey of Boston and Walker D. Hines of New York, special counsel for the board of directors.

Concerning other steamship lines, application has been made under the Panama Canal act to the Interstate Commerce commission, and their disposition will be determined by that body. Until the plans are worked out and put into effect the management and operation of the properties will be continued as at present.

Chairman Elliott said that he would return to New York tomorrow afternoon and come back to Washington next week to put into writing the detailed agreement.

Late tonight Chairman Elliott issued a statement as follows:

"The New Haven management, while it could not agree with all the views of the Department of Justice, nevertheless felt in the interest of a peaceful solution of the New Haven railroad situation it was wise to yield and to work in full harmony with the department in bringing about an adjustment.

The general business and transportation situation in New England is difficult but the properties are inherently sound and with courage and patience, without doubt, could be made not olyn good properties to serve the public but in due time better properties for returning incomes to the owners of securities.

"Pending the adjustment of the details with government and while new financial plans are being completed, improvements of all kinds on money spent except such as is necessary for safety.

The agreement was mapped out at a conference today between Attorney-General Mellreynolds and Chairman Elliott, Dr. Hadley and Lucius S. Storrs, president of the Connecticut Trolleys Company.

The agreement in its features strikingly bears out the exclusive announcement in last Wednesday's AMERICAN of the final disposition of the New Haven holdings. At that time the AMERICAN stated that the Boston & Maine would be given up along with all the trolley holdings, but that the unsettled question then was the disposition to be made of the steamship interests of the road. This was the chief problem tackled at today's conference, which lasted several hours.

The AMERICAN said further:

"In any event it has been settled that there is to be no criminal prosecution of any former officers or directors of the New Haven."

This is understood to stand in today's agreement. It was declared that the Department of Justice is not to take any of the threatened legal proceedings. The threat of prosecution to the limit of the law has been

LET B. & M. DIRECTORS GIVE ACCOUNTING, SAYS LAWRENCE

The news of the New Haven's surrender of the Boston & Maine and its trolley holdings evoked striking comment from leading Bostonians last night. Some of the statements follow:

William B. Lawrence of Medford, owner of the largest block of Boston & Maine stock outside the New Haven Railroad, said:

"The news that the New Haven Railroad at last is to divorce the Boston & Maine Railroad is certainly a gratifying item to the stockholders of the Boston & Maine. The law forbids any such alliance as this road had increased in two months before the New Haven control, the New Haven has increased of hauled tonnage of eight times the Maine's increase and the Boston & Albany had an increase of fifteen times the increase of the Boston & Maine.

DIRECTORS GUILTY.

"In other words, the Boston & Maine directors have been deaf, dumb, blind and motionless while the road was being robbed of its freight. These directors have been blind as regards in their duty as they would be considered remiss and guilty had they been charged with the keeping of a treasury and thus permitted its resources to be stolen.

"With this severing of the New Haven from the Boston & Maine let there be discharged from the Boston & Maine all the New Haven men who have assisted in robbing the Maine by this system of granting the preferential routings. If the old routings could be restored there is little doubt that the net earnings would be greatly increased at once.

"The Boston & Maine has been run into a $20,000,000 bankrupt purchase stock of leased roads that it didn't need any more than a cat needs two tails.

"An honest receiver of the Boston & Maine would have discharged the counting from the Boston & Maine directors who permitted diversion of freight to the New Haven, the Boston & Albany and the Central New England Railroad, as well as an accounting from the roads that profited by this diversion.

HIGHBROW RAIDERS.

"As bad as the United States government treated the Indians, that treatment was not a circumstance to the treatment accorded the stockholders of the Boston & Maine system when it permitted a group of New York highbrows, millions short in their accounts, to take hold of the Boston & Maine road in 1907."

George W. Anderson, member of the Public Service Commission, said: "Yesterday (Friday) the Supreme Court ended an attempt to capitalize for twenty years at 6 per cent, plus a bank or directors' commission of nearly two millions of dollars, a floating debt mainly incurred by the illegal purchase by the New Haven Railroad of non-railroad properties.

"Today Chairman Elliott announces that the company is yielding to the inevitable and will dispose of properties that yesterday it was trying to capitalize permanently.

"I have pointed out the probability of this outcome in the dissenting opinion I wrote on the bond case on October 14.

MUST BENEFIT THE LAW.

"This result shows that there was never any legitimate occasion to attempt to issue $67,000,000 worth of bonds.

"I sincerely hope that we are at the beginning of an era of railroad management which will be distinguished from the immediate past by a regard for Massachusetts law and by a regard for elementary arithmetic. Given a few years of respect for Massachusetts law and for elementary arithmetic and the New England railroads will rehabilitate themselves."

Louius Tuttle, former president of the Boston & Maine Railroad, said:

"I have heard the news from Washington, but I have no comment whatever to make."

Walsh Hails Spirit of New Regime to Comply with Law

Governor David I. Walsh was asked to comment on the New Haven's surrender last night. He said:

I have expected this news. There was no other honorable course for the New Haven but a complete surrender All New England should rejoice. Long litigation would serve no good purpose—it would merely postpone and delay the day of rehabilitation. I congratulate the new management of the New Haven on its disposition to admit the facts, confess its guilt and face the future with a firm purpose to comply hereafter with the law.

I shall now be most concerned to know the terms of separation. They are of supreme importance, for upon them will be determined the manner and how soon we are going to restore our railroad transportation system.

If the Maine is now to be separated, the time is ripe for a complete reorganization of this road. It will never be profitable to its stockholders, or a useful agent for promoting the prosperity of New England, until this is done. Let us all get together, both the owners and the State governments, and plan at once a strong, secure and safe railroad system for northern New England.

Massachusetts stands ready to do its part.

the club held over the New Haven directors.

The placing of the Sound lines problem in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission for solution is decided both as a victory and a concession by the government.

Under the Canal Act the question of competition is the pivotal point. If the commission finds that the New Haven is in competition with its Sound lines, then these steamship interests will be ordered transferred at once. Should the commission on the other hand decide that the railroad and its Sound lines are not in competition, then the government loses its battle to divorce the railroad and these steamship interests.

TO WORK OUT DETAILS.

No statement was forthcoming tonight as to the details of the Boston & Maine separation plan. It has been said that the Boston & Maine, under the original plan of Charles Elliott was to be turned over to trustees to be operated for a term of years after which the stock is to be sold and pass into other hands. These details will be threshed out and finally determined upon when Chairman Elliott confers with the Attorney-General next week.

EXPECT FAVORABLE DECISION FOR THAW

conspiracy charge as Thaw have been bailed out in $1,800.

"I am glad there will be no court hearing Monday. Monday I will make arrangements to offer a motion for adoption of the recommendations in the Commission's report. This will start proceedings."

The report that the commission recommends Thaw for bail is based on various pertinent indications.

The Commission has heard several witnesses. All these, both at public and private hearings, said that their constant observation of Thaw made them sure that he would not be a menace to the public if freed on bail.

SPOKE WELL OF THAW.

Such men as United States Marshal Eugene P. Nute of Farmington, N. H., who has been closely associated with Thaw since early last September, told the Commission Friday at Concord that he did not think Thaw has shown a harmful disposition, nor did he deem him a menace if bailed.

Sheriff Holman Drew, who has been equally close to Thaw at Concord, testified to the same effect, as did Special Officer Clark D. Stevens.

Another thing taken in Thaw's favor was the attitude of Jerome, who refused to come to the Commission hearings. Nor was Jerome's attitude one to gratify any commission, no matter how judicial.

Under the Commission circumstances, too, that was regarded as favorable to Thaw. That was the conclusive attitude of the Commission as it began its final conference in this city. General Streeter, as chairman and spokesman, made no bones about saying that yesterday's session would be the final one, showing that the Commissioners were well on their way to a decision—if they did not have their minds all made up at the time.

The finality with which General Streeter spoke was taken as a sign toward Thaw, not against him.

Thaw himself feels confident that bail will be recommended, according to dispatches from Concord, though he carefully refrains from saying so, lest he seem to be anticipating the recommendation of the commission and the decision of Governor Dix.

WILL REMAIN IN CONCORD.

When asked in Concord if he plans to leave the city and go to the Thaw home in Pittsburgh, in case he is allowed to go on bail, he said that he will remain in Concord in any event.

Thaw is not seeking to hustle out of New Hampshire at the first practical opportunity. He is living there quietly. He wishes to have his celebrated case settled by legal tribunals. His attitude and demeanor in Concord are believed to commend him to bail.

The Thaw sanity commission is composed of General Streeter and Dr. Bancroft of Concord, Dr. George A. Blumer of Providence and Dr. Morris H. Parker of Boston.

The final conference was held at Dr. Prince's home, No. 454 Beacon street, because the Boston physician was held there by illness which kept him in the house, while not incapacitating him from taking part in the deliberations.

Dr. Prince's three colleagues came down to Boston from Concord Friday night. General Streeter put up at the Union Club and Dr. Bancroft at the Copley-Plaza. Dr. Blumer confined to his Providence home and came back to Boston yesterday morning for the conference.

General Streeter was up early at the Union Club—a good deal earlier than the average Boston man of affairs is about—and treated himself to a long walk before leaving for Dr. Prince's home.

To reporters the general said that he and his fellow-commissioners had agreed not to disclose any of their decision themselves, but to file it with Judge Aldrich's clerk late that evening.

Doctors Blumer and Bancroft joined the general at Dr. Prince's and the final conference began. There was a brief recess for noon luncheon, and then the session was resumed. It ended by mid-afternoon and then the report of the decision was taken to Concord and filed.

This ended the task to which the Commission had been appointed by Judge Aldrich—to investigate and report whether Harry K. Thaw should be released on bail, pending the settlement of his case in New Hampshire.

To Keep Skin Healthy Youthful, Wrinkleless

Now that the social season is late, be especially careful to keep your skin in fine condition. You know how exceptions complexion defects appear under the bright light of the drawing or ball room. Also how very evident are some makeups when similarly illuminated. I have myself discarded cosmetics entirely, using a process which gives far better results, and which means no fine of the skin. At night I smear on a thin coat of ordinary powdered cocoa-butter, and next morning. This gradually absorbs the dirt, grease, etc., and is easily removed with a gradual, but most wonderful and beneficial growth forth, providing a complexion as clear and smooth and delicately tinted as a young girl's. Get an ounce of powdered cocoa-butter at your druggist's and try this remarkable treatment.

Remember, too, that wrinkles, even the finer lines, are not easily concealed in a brilliantly lighted room. You can, however, obliterate these wrinkles if powdered cocoa-butter is used. Just a little rubbed into the face won't look sticky, as after using pastes.—Aunt Sally in Woman's Home Companion.

Identify Man on Pickpocket Charge

Harris Hoffman, twenty-one, of Malden, was last night arrested by the City Hall avenue police on the charge of attempting to steal pocketbooks from women. Mrs. Margaret Riley of Brighton identified Hoffman as the man who stole her pocketbook.

Forgot Invitation to Visit Royalty

It Was Just as Well, as Queen Mary Canceled Call.

LONDON, Jan. 10. — Among the many incidents of Queen Mary's economy, none has created more amusement than when Prince Henry invited two school friends for a week of shooting directly after Christmas. The prince said nothing about issuing the invitations until a few days before his guests were to arrive.

Queen Mary then informed her son that every room in York cottage was occupied and although Queen Alexandra offered to accommodate the boys at Sandringham, Queen Mary insisted the boys should not be allowed to come. She dispatched two equerries to the boys' homes to explain why it would be impossible to receive them.

One boy was at home, but the other was in Paris with his parents and after the messenger had chased him all over Paris, the boy said he had forgotten all about the engagement.

LOVE BUREAU IS BUSY AT HARVARD

But Crimson Sternly Banishes "Correspondence" Ad. from Students' Paper.

The student managers of the Harvard Crimson have declined to run any further advertising for the new "Correspondence Bureau," started by the mysterious L. C. V., owing to the criticisms that have been gratuitously passed along to the Crimson's office since the appeal to "Sighing Lovers and Undutiful Sons" first appeared.

It is rumored that the faculty may also take some cognizance of the bureau.

It was learned yesterday that the chief business of the bureau is to meet demands of students who, after being entertained by Back Bay families and by society women and their husbands and daughters elsewhere at week-ends, dances, balls, banquets, theatre parties and the like, wake up to the fact that properly worded missives must be dispatched to thank their hosts and hostesses for such favors and entertainments.

The manager of the novel correspondence bureau is the business head of the concern and looks after the getting of business advertising, etc., but the operating writers consist of a trio of Harvard students.

Following is a letter written by the bureau to a charming young lady in a Southern State who had been inclined to drop a certain Harvard youth into the discard owing to his backslidings and recriminations:

Dear Miss Blank:

It may be that we are addressing you with rare temerity, and perhaps we are, but the exigencies of the occasion should bring forth forbearance rather than adverse criticism. This afternoon a friend of mine and I, both friends of Jack, went out to the infirmary to see him. No doubt it will seem strange to you, from what he has said of the great state of —— to find that we from New York and Kansas respectively are kindred spirits existing with Jack.

But we have come to know him, to admire his character and personality and count him among our closest friends. When we went we took a letter to him. He was so cheerful when we arrived, but when he read your letter his spirits seemed to droop and when we asked for his reply he said he could not write it.

Now Jack is not seriously ill; please do not think that he is. But won't you please write him a friendly note? It is known that during convalescence health comes quicker and sooner with the mind completely composed. We sincerely trust, Miss Blank, that this letter will be received by you in the same spirit that it is sent. Sincerely,

FRIENDS OF JACK.

HERE'S THE "AD."

The advertisement, which the Harvard Crimson managers have declined to run again, owing to criticism, reads:

SIGHING LOVERS!
UNDUTIFUL SONS!

Letters of all kinds written to order. Requests for checks you have instructed to ask for—letters pacifying irate fathers, letters of acceptance and regret—letters of apology—bread and butter letters, etc.

Any little love affair we can fix up.

We succeed where the individual fails.

Warning By Wellesley Head

College President Fears Lowering of Moral Standard in Modern Styles.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, president of Wellesley College, sets a standard for the college woman and particularly Wellesley women, to maintain, that is staggering in its immensity.

"How work which the college women can accomplish, possibly," and here Miss Pendleton smiled a bit whimsically as though doubtful of the success of her wish, "is to stem the mad craze of extravagance sweeping across the world, and particularly to change the tendency of woman towards more and more revealing the figure in the slashes, swirls and transparencies of dress. College women are naturally conservative. Though many a freshman comes to Wellesley arrayed in the ultra-style, the kind that makes you turn about and gasp, she quickly discards those garments."

"Because of rules, and taboo?" was asked.

"Not at all, but because of public opinion. The college woman, above all others, as I said, is conservative, and she detests being conspicuous."

Asked if she believed the present style of dress affects woman's morals or those of men, Miss Pendleton said:

"Personally, living in the college as I do, I can't say much of the effects of such dress; but it certainly does seem that skirts showing the wearer's knees, gauzy silk stockings and bodices which but half veil the figure cannot but have a tendency to let down the bars of convention and to lower the rigid standards of purity in thought and speech which do so much to preserve the nation's integrity."

Miss Pendleton is an enthusiastic believer that the college woman makes the best wife and mother.

"She does not marry young; she is a better judge of mankind; more in sympathy with the world's work, the efforts of her husband to make his way," Miss Pendleton explained.

"She is even more thoroughly in harmony with her children, for in the college gymnasium she has learned to play; in the classes she has learned how to impart knowledge. And she has generally learned to be just, charitable, self-controlled, so that very, very few college women ever seek the divorce court.

"I certainly wish the people would disabuse their minds of the thought that college girls do not marry. Statistics prove they do and in my visits to the various Alumnae clubs, I find more than half of the graduates are married and are training their boys and girls to be men of the same joy of service and knowledge of responsibilities which they acquired at their Alma Mater."

ELLEN F. PENDLETON

Favor Suffrage House Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—A special House committee on woman suffrage will be recommended by the rules committee soon after the reconvening of the session. Members of the rules body have decided to report to the House before the end of next week a resolution to create the committee as requested by the woman suffragists. Chairman Henry of the rules committee returned to his duties today. He is now in favor of the creation of the new House committee, the appointment of which will be the greatest victory won by American suffragists.

'Zoo' Bear Has Merry Run Through Streets

"Moscow" Climbs a Tree Where Police Round Him Up.

"Moscow," a fine, husky, cinnamon bear, grew tired yesterday afternoon, shortly after lunch, of his cramped home in the Zoo at Franklin Park. Putting his fore paws between two of the steel bars, he squeezed gave or twice, took an afternoon stretch and then, pushing the bars aside like a pair of reeds, walked forth to freedom.

Paul Spiesert, the keeper, tried to lure him back, but "Moscow," with a bear of independence, resumed his promenade.

A lady, whose backyard he visited, telephoned in fright to Police Station 12 at Jamaica Plain.

After a saunter over two or three blocks to the Pine Grove, where Moscow leisurely climbed a tree.

Finally, a bear cage, many yards away, waiting for entrapment, a long pole with burning cotton waste at the end of it and Moscow, fully buffeted cage in his places, of both state, was once more behind the bars.

The success of this sale, year after year, has been because we have offered seasonable and desirable merchandise at prices no higher than asked elsewhere for the other kind.

Filene's

Lots have been planned to last two days. Many smaller lots are not mentioned below. Naturally the earliest prices will go first. Come Monday if possible—as early in the day as possible

Monday and Tuesday Women's and Children's New Clothes at ½ to ⅓ OFF

At 8:30 Monday we begin a remarkable sale to meet the great event which was first held at this time in 1905, and which has been held every year since. This is the history of it:

January, 1905. We nearly sold out in one day the large stock of Gross & Strauss—a well-known apparel shop that had decided to go out of business.

January, 1906. This day was stormy, and we did not quite equal the 1905 sale.

January, 1907. This day set a new high-water mark for sales at Filene's, big as our records were.

January, 1908. And here we went ahead of 1907—by thousands of dollars.

January, 1909. Again ahead, and again by a large amount.

January, 1910. Exceeded all previous records by many thousands of dollars.

January, 1911. Beat even the 1910 figures, though it was one of the coldest days of the winter.

January, 1912. Heavy snow and rain—but another decided increase in business.

January, 1913. First in the new store—nearly doubled previous highest record.

And Now Another Great Sale---For Two Days Instead of One

LENOX GIRL DENIES SHE KILLED BABE

Miss DuFresne Names Joseph W. Lewis, Prominent Pittsfield Man as the Infant's Father

RELATES PITIFUL STORY

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Guarded constantly by detectives whose avowed purpose is to prevent her from ending her own life while she remains a prisoner in the most luxurious room of the Memorial Hospital of Orange, N. J., Miss Melvina DuFresne, the twenty-four-year-old Lenox, Mass., girl who is charged with slaying a two weeks' old daughter today, told Detective Mason and County Physician McKenzie the pathetic story of her life.

"It is true that I am not 'Mrs. Ashley,' she told the county officials. 'My name is Melvina DuFresne. I am a member of a respected family in Lenox, near Pittsfield, Mass., and my mother, father and sisters are all living.

"I am twenty-four years old. I left home several years ago to seek employment, although it was against the wishes of my parents. I was a graduate of high school and knew stenography, so that I had no difficulty in obtaining a position with the firm of Lewis & Bennett, a prominent legal concern in Pittsfield.

"I became Mr. Lewis' stenographer and secretary and always my relations with my family were as friendly as possible under the circumstances. Of my relations with Mr. Lewis, I will say nothing, but when I found I was to become a mother I was decided that I had best come here. I have a sister living in East Orange.

DENIES KILLING BABE.

"I came here early in December, without letting the people in Pittsfield know where I was going. I boarded first with Mrs. Arthur F. Williams, where I was known as 'Mrs. Ashley.' I said my husband was a traveling salesman. My sister visited me there. A few days before my baby was born I came to the hospital and as I had plenty of money, I had no trouble in getting the best of accommodations.

"I am the real you know, but of this charge you make against me, I am absolutely innocent. The baby was welcome, I know, and the little might have been worse than we know, but it is horrible to say that I caused its death. Such a thing would be utterly beyond me.

"In the death certificate filed in the county records yesterday the name of the dead child is given as 'May Virginia Ashley,' and the name of the father as 'Joseph W. Lewis,' or Joseph W. Lewis, member of the firm of Lewis & Bennett, which is one of the most prominent lawyers in New England. He began life as a stenographer for the ministry of Wesleyan College in Middletown, Ct., and after graduating in the class of 1871 he became pastor of a Methodist church at Verbank, in Dutchess County, N. Y.

BEGAN AS A PREACHER.

After one year in the ministry he left it to become a newspaper reporter and in 1889 he became managing editor of the Middletown Herald. Later he bought the Pittsfield Journal and managed it until he was elected city clerk, when he was admitted to the bar. He has always been prominent in politics.

Mr. Lewis is married and has four children all living with him in Pittsfield. His eldest son, Hamilton Lewis, is secretary of the Pittsfield Y. M. C. A., the Elder Lewis is a past master of a Masonic lodge, past commander of a Sons of Veterans company, an Elk, and a leading member of the Board of Trade. He is considered wealthy.

Mr. Lewis left Pittsfield today for New York, making no statement to the press. A few hours after his arrival here an attorney who gave his name as Mark G. Holstein appeared in Orange and obtained permission to see Miss DuFresne in the hospital. He bore a card of introduction from Augustus McCosker, an Orange lawyer, and said he had been retained by John McCosker, brother-in-law of the girl.

According to county physician the dead child beyond a doubt was strangled. The pin of flowers are plainly visible on its throat.

Winns' Love Idol Shattered; So She Gives Him to Another

Wife Seeking Divorce Helps Husband Pack Grip for Trip

Former Woburn School Teacher Reconciled to Conditions in Her Home.

By CONSTANCE WILLIAMS.

Like a romantic separation of Jack and Marion Manola Mason when they agreed to disagree one morning at the breakfast table because the gilt had worn off their little love idol and Marion drove Jack down to the station, kissed him good-by and waved a farewell just as the train disappeared from view, is the ending of Grace Winn's drama between Attie and George E. Winn of Woburn.

On Friday, May, Winn's loving husband for dinner, and, alleging unfaithfulness, helped Mr. Winn pack his clothes into a brand new suit case, smiled, waved him adieu to the waiting team and waved an affectionate farewell as the horses started on the first lap of the journey that was to bear the husband to Donna, Tex., where the wife knew he expected to join Mrs. Joseph Hayward.

LIVED IN PEACE.

Mrs. Winn with smiling brown eyes declared to me that she has not quarrelled with her husband.

"We have lived here in this house since the quit was brought on amicable terms," she said.

"Mr. Winn has told me freely just how he feels and I have tried to understand the situation from his point of view. Today in an hour he is going away. I am helping him get ready now for his journey to see this other woman, Mrs. Joseph Hayward.

The Winns on Friday dwelt together in the fine mansion on Winn street, Burlington, which is their home. It was the day when they were to separate, the husband going South to join Mrs. Hayward. Mrs. Winn remaining in the home to await the conference which, she said, she said, had told her he wished to have with Mrs. Hayward. Many broad acres surround the home with its pillared veranda in front, its plate glass bay windows, garage and many accessories that go with a sumptuous and handsomely built estate. Winn for many years has been a milk contractor, having only recently sold out the interests and retired from the milk business.

Only twin bright red spots on her cheeks betokened that anything out of the ordinary was happening as Mrs. Winn, a pleasant faced, smiling, brown-eyed woman opened the door in response to my ring.

$20,000 ATTACHMENT.

Mr. Winn was at home. He was preparing for a long journey. He was setting out on a journey to Texas, where he would join Mrs. Joseph Hayward. Until Mr. Winn had seen Mrs. Hayward there would not be any change in the status of the suit which Mrs. Winn had brought against Mr. Winn for divorce. The attachment for $20,000 upon her husband's property which had been filed with the divorce petition would also remain in force.

Mrs. Winn, fifty years old, perhaps a little older, but splendidly preserved, received me in the parlor, with frilly lace at her cuffs and neck, seemed glad to have company—as she talked—where the thing, the obsession of this tragedy in the love tangle of her husband's straying, and then she, I could feel that her mind reverted again and again to the fateful night before last in the home pastor of a Methodist church at Verbank, in Dutchess County, N. Y.

MRS. HAYWARD, ON LEFT, AND MRS. WINN, WOMEN IN STRANGE CASE

keep from that. It seemed to me that it was the most essential thing in all this uprooting of what had come to be a part of my very being. To keep a balance—above all else; and so we decided to remain there even after I had filed my suit. There were hours when we sat together and talked it over. But the more we talked the less nearer a solution we came.

"All through this I have kept close to my husband in thought. That seemed to me to be necessary if I was to effect a righting of what seemed all wrong. But it has turned out as it began.

"Mr. Winn has never shown any signs of anger towards me either. It has been as amicable and agreeable an arrangement as could have been expected. Only we have had the benefit of being able to meet alone and talk over the terrible problem.

At first I thought that there must be some way of settlement. Mr. Winn talked with me so coolly and so rationally it seemed to me. Our relations—they had been always pleasant. Why had this fearful nightmare settled down between us? I kept asking that over and over to myself and in different words, in those circuitous ways that a woman sometimes adopts, I asked my husband, too. But while he would discover even after I had filed my suit. There were hours when we sat together and talked it over. But the more we talked the less nearer a solution we came.

is no way in which it can be brought I back again."

These facts I had learned as by chance I approached the Winn mansion a little later and beheld the parting between the stooping red-cheeked husband of about fifty and Mrs. Winn. I saw the front door open and the man in a freshly pressed suit and flying ulster, red tie, cheeks that shone carmine from recent shaving, and a black well-fitting derby hat come out first, holding a new dress suit case marked at one end G. E. W. in his hand. He crossed the semi-rotunda of the veranda and was down a single step when the woman appeared at the door. A smile parted her lips; her eyes, too, frankly smiled. There was neither a hint of tremor, nor a suspicion of a tear.

PRESIDENT BIDS GOOD-BY TO SOUTH

Venerable Ex-Slave Insists That Wilson Take Picture of Her As Keepsake.

PASS CHRISTIAN, Miss., Jan. 10.—The Gulf Coast bid farewell to President Wilson today. More than 2,000 persons, lent upon maintaining the tradition of southern hospitality, shook hands with the President in the forty-five minutes he allotted to them to say "Good bye."

The visitors came from near and far, white and colored alike, and the most picturesque figure in the lot was the "venerable ex-slave 'Aunt Lucy,' who says she is ninety-five years old. She insisted in presenting the President with a picture of herself taken in her younger days.

"I want you to have this as a keepsake, Mistah President," she said.

General A. B. Oxford of Birmingham who fought with Wheeler's cavalry in the Civil War, and has never flinched in his loyalty to the Confederacy, was another well wisher of the President. He wore his old Confederate uniform at the reception and told the President that all the South was with him.

Twelve-year-old Simpson of Pass Christian, was one of the earliest hand shakers, and she was greeted in cordiality by the Chief Executive that she says she is certain of "holding her job now."

It was one more a children's day. Although they have had more than their share of attention from the President, they came in force today, and at the close of the reception joined with a number of their elders in singing "America." At the President's side were the Misses Margaret and Eleanor Wilson, who expressed to many of their newly "made" friends in Dixie Christian their delight over the cordiality of the reception tendered them.

At the end of the line Colonel Robert Ewing, Democratic National Committeeman from Louisiana, dropped in to see the President for a few minutes. He was the first political associate who has seen the President since coming to Pass Christian. President Wilson told several of his visitors that he has not felt better in health in many years, and expressed pleasure at the happy termination of the visit. He left Pass Christian at 10:45 tonight and will reach Washington Tuesday morning.

Drink Hot Tea For a Bad Cold

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or ask the German folks called "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

Dying Man Gave Name of "Kirby"

An unidentified man fell unconscious on the Common, near Park street, yesterday afternoon, and died on the way to the City Hospital. Before dying he murmured the name of E. Kirby. He also said something that sounded like Hanson. He was about forty-five years old, five feet seven inches tall. There was a bracelet tattooed on his left wrist. He had $72.75 in his pockets.

Princess Chimay Wins Rent Suit

PARIS, Jan. 10.—The Princess Chimay, the Clara Ward that was, appeared in court today to recover rent which she had paid in advance for a luxurious apartment, which she had been occupying until she was forced to leave it on account of the frequent seizure of her furnishings by creditors of the landlord.

The Princess is seeking a divorce from her latest husband, Riccardi, who fitted the apartment for $6,000 when the couple arrived in Paris for their honeymoon. A verdict was given in favor of the Princess.

SMOKE of Herbs for CATARRH

FIG. 1—Shows why SALVES, BALMS, SNUFFS, etc., often fail. See by the BLACK how little of the disease they reach.

FIG. 2—Shows how little can possibly be done by ATOMIZERS, SPRAYS, DOUCHES, WASHES and ALL LIQUIDS. See by the black how far they all fall short of reaching THE SEAT of the disease.

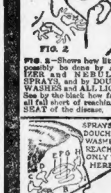

FIG. 3—Shows how little good is done when a SPRAY or LIQUID is applied by way of the mouth. See by the BLACK how little of the diseased parts are reached.

you will be convinced. The regular package, containing enough to last from 25 to 35 days, sent by mail, postpaid for $1. It is not on sale at the drug stores. Send for the free sample today.

The Illustrations herein tell the whole story about the treatment of Catarrh. The BLACK, where the arrows point in Figs. 1, 2 and 3, shows how little of the disease, Catarrh, can possibly be reached by the usual methods of treatment and in Fig. 4 the BLACK shows the complete sweep made by Dr. Blosser's Remedy.

Catarrh is a disease of the mucous membrane. It is characterized by discharge through the nostrils or down to the throat. It usually begins with a cold in the head. Beginning in the nostrils it spreads to all the mucous membranes of the body, even getting into the stomach and lungs. The nasty discharge being swallowed, it sours the stomach, and from the stomach it is taken into the blood, and poisons and deranges the whole body. The fact that all the time nothing can be done in any way from the nose back into the head—down into the throat—into the bronchial tubes and lungs. Herein is its greatest danger.

Dr. Blosser's Discovery

While engaged in the general practice of medicine Dr. Blosser had many patients suffering from Catarrh whom he was unable to cure, although he prescribed for them by the rules taught in medical books and colleges. He saw that the methods of treatment were wrong, and reasoned that as Catarrh is produced by breathing cold and damp air, so it should be cured by breathing a warm medicated vapor.

After nine years of investigation he discovered a combination of healing herbs, leaves and flowers (containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs) which, when placed in an ordinary clean pipe—made into medicated cigarettes or burned on a plate and by drawing the medicated smoke into the mouth and inhaling into the lungs, or by sending it out through the nostrils in a perfectly natural way, would speedily relieve all catarrhal diseases. As shown in the accompanying illustration the warm, healing vapor is carried directly to the very parts affected. This remedy fights and kills Catarrh where liquids, sprays, douches, salves and medicated creams cannot possibly go. It is a most reliable treatment, and is so simple and convenient that it can be used at home by man, woman or child.

FIG. 4—The BLACK in above cut shows the parts reached by Dr. Blosser's Remedy. Just the whole sweep of the BLACK, nose or throat or lungs. It goes to EVERY PART, and it wipes out the disease wherever it goes.

OJINAGA FALLS TO REBELS; FEDERAL FORCES BECOME U. S. PRISONERS AFTER WILD FLIGHT

Victorious Villa Captures Hundreds Crossing Rio Grande; Mercodo Missing.

PRESIDIO, Tex., Jan. 10.—Ojinaga has fallen and the whole Federal army has sought refuge on United States soil and surrendered to Major McNamee, commanding the border patrol at Presidio.

The Federal commander Mercado is missing.

Villa's whirlwind assault under cover of the heavy bombardment of his big guns planted in Arroyos, within easy range of the supposedly impregnable Federal fortress, wrought havoc in the ranks of the defenders and it soon became evident that further resistance was useless.

A dash for the river was then determined upon. Villa had been expecting this and the retreating column was harassed by rebel cavalry and subjected to a galling fire from the guns which had been turned upon the fortress. Great care was taken, however, that none of the shots should fall on American territory, and when the retreating column reached the river they were not molested further.

It was intimated earlier in the day that the Federal commanders, in a conference held in Ojinaga, had decided, if pressed too hard by Villa, to make their way to the river, cross over and surrender to the American border patrol.

The steady steam of refugees crossing the river in the early evening had prepared Major McNamee and his men for the exodus of the Federal garrison from Ojinaga. Fifty Federals were among those crossing late in the afternoon. It was explained that they had been cut off from the fortress by the rebels and had been forced to seek refuge on this side, as capture would mean immediate execution.

Fifty Federal regulars were captured by the rebel advance guard and the river in the afternoon, but it was announced that being Regular troops they would not meet the fate that has been pronounced on all the Federal volunteers who have fallen into the hands of Villa.

Orozco and Salazar, the two Federal division commanders upon whose heads a price has been set by Villa are reported to have cut their way through the rebel lines to the south.

General Castro, another division commander, has been captured. It was Castro who commanded the Federals at Juarez when the latter town was captured by Villa.

The Federal losses during the attack were very heavy, but the rebel loss is placed at less than 100 killed.

HUNDREDS CAPTURED.

More than 2,500 Federals surrendered to Major McNamee and are being brought to army camp here. Several hundred Federals, heading for the river to cross the American side, were captured by Villa's men. Many of these will be executed.

Some of the Federals who have surrendered on this side of the river say the reason for the evacuation was exhaustion of ammunition.

The rebels are now in full possession of the evacuated town and have sent cavalry columns out in all directions to round up the Federals.

Villa assumed personal command in the attack and divided his forces into five columns.

Until night fell the movements of the Rebels could be observed from the American side of the river, while after dark the flashes of the guns could be seen in all directions around the Federal fortress.

During last week's siege the Rebel bombardment was decidedly ineffective.

Refugees swarmed across the river during the day. Hundreds of them have been trudging all day along the road to Marfa, where they may take trains for El Paso or other points.

Small Fire Chokes Washington Street

Needless Alarm Calls Out Full Fighting Force.

Fire in the top story of the building at No. 258 Washington street, occupied by Bates & Company, dealers in clothing and linen, choked up the thoroughfare last night, from Milk to State streets, with a confusion of engines and onlookers.

The first fire apparatus responded to a still alarm, but somebody who saw smoke issuing from the top of the five-story brick building rang in box 41, always a signal for a strong force of apparatus. The damage was about $500.

500,000 BULGARS IN DIRE DISTRESS

Member of Paris Legation Brings News of Suffering; Welcome U. S. Aid.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The Bulgarian legation today received fresh information concerning the distress in Bulgaria. The chief informant was Basil Gheorghieff, second secretary of the Paris legation, who had just returned after spending several months in his native country, during which time he took an active part in the relief work. He said today that the number of sufferers in old Bulgaria and the annexed portions of Thrace and Macedonia was not less than 500,000.

The number of Bulgarians who were driven from their ancestral lands, said Gheorghieff, "exceed 200,000, while more than 300,000 people were driven back from their homes in Thrace and Macedonia. The greatest misery is due to lack of clothing and shelter from the bitter Winter weather. Outside of this there is great suffering by several hundred thousands who are without food and means to earn money to buy food and clothing.

"The Bulgarian government is doing all it can to care for these people, but I will frankly admit that it is unable to meet all of the demands. The offer of relief from America is regarded appreciation. It will be welcomed in the spirit in which it is given, and everything will be done to aid those who are in charge of the distribution work so that it may be effective to the highest degree. The most urgent need is for food and clothing. When the immediate suffering is relieved steps can then be taken in the work of rehabilitation and in a few months the population will again be self supporting."

Pimples Will Not Be Pardoned

The Failure to Use Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a Proved Remedy for Pimples, Convicts You of Unpardonable Negligence.

Pimples are an offense to others and a crime against yourself. People have only tolerated you because they consider the condition of your face to be a misfortune against which you had no remedy. But now that it is universally known that Stuart's Calcium Wafers will cure the worst cases of pimples, blackheads, blotches, eruptions and liver-spots, your continued negligence will be considered inexcusable.

The person with a pimply face is always unattractive and at a disadvantage in society. Those ugly disfigurements act at naught the effect of the most perfect features. If your face and figure had the classical outlines of a Greek statue, a mass of pimples would still destroy your beauty. A clear, fresh skin is absolutely essential to any real beauty.

"I Feel Like I Am in Jail, I Am So Ashamed of These Pimples."

A beautiful complexion is entirely dependent on a rich, pure, abundant supply of blood to the skin. Calcium sulphide has long been recognized as the most effective blood purifier. Quickly converting all impurities into gaseous form that readily escapes from the pores, it purifies the most vitiated blood in remarkably short order. Calcium sulphide is the chief component of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, which contain besides certain mild alteratives that invigorate the blood. You will be surprised at the rapidity with which all face disorders will disappear, once the blood has been cleansed of its impurities through their use.

Stop being a nuisance and an annoyance to other people. You have a right to beauty and health and happiness. You have a right to the admiration and respect of others. Take the means that will gain you all of these. Get a 50c box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at your druggist and win back your birthright of beauty.

Beneath Your Fat a Graceful Figure Dwells

How would you like, some day, to find your own slim self, emerging from the pads and rolls of fat that have covered up cheek bips, waist, chin, cheeks and neck, covering up and distorting the lithe, graceful figure beneath? Then ogen this self. To remove or prevent these unwelcome deposits—control their source, and sustain without pairing the price of violent exercise, dieting, self-denials or impairment of health; in short, to find one's own slim self beneath the fatty sheath—has been made possible by a noted physician, whom Marmola Prescription tablets (thousands of grateful men and women to reduce safely and surely from 10 to 30 pounds per day until the natural health of the system is restored and disease ends. Marmola Prescription Tablets, the new form of this great remedy, each contain an exact dose of the famous Marmola Prescription. Like the latter they are obtainable at leading druggists and laboratories. Every druggist who sells these wonderful little tablets will be pleased to tell you the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich. 75c for a large case in the uniform price.

PEEVISH, CONSTIPATED CHILDREN LOVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

Harmless "fruit laxative" cleanses stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has stomach ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in just a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless fruit laxative; they love its delicious taste and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

For Good Health and Digestion

Before meals and on retiring, take a tablespoonful of

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

It will stimulate the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to healthy action, thereby improving the digestion and assimilation of the food and giving the system its full proportion of nourishment. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey contains the splendid qualities of ripe grain carefully malted, so essential to the weak and run-down. To safeguard yourself against imitations look for the "Old Chemist" head on the label and see that the seal over the cork is unbroken. A few unscrupulous dealers have gone so far as to fill old Duffy bottles with imitation whiskey for the sake of greater profit. Protect yourself against this evil by shunning the bottle when it is empty. The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in sealed bottles only at most druggists, grocers and dealers at $1.00 a large bottle. Valuable medical booklet sent free. One of the best purchases we have been able to make in many a day. A capture of 4,500 yards by our New York resident buyer, being a clean-up of one of the leading manufacturers. The entire 4,500 yards will, undoubtedly, sell in a hurry, as this fine silk and cotton crepe de chine is just what is most wanted for the soft, clinging frocks worn this season. A yard wide. In this fine variety of new shades:

Light Blue. Pink. Lavender. Peach Tan. American Beauty. Copenhagen. Old Rose Biscuit. Cream. Leather. Navy. Cerise. Gray

ROUSING OVATION FOR KENNY IN GREAT TREMONT TEMPLE RALLY

Men of All Parties Unite in Appeal for His Election as Mayor on Tuesday

Roger F. Connell, Jr., E. J. Powers, Samuel Hamlen, A. L. Shrigley, William Minot and a score of others.

J. A. DENNISON PRESIDED.

The early birds had a long wait. The Ninth Regiment Band made it interesting. The call was for patriotic airs, in this respect the gathering had a Progressive Party flavor. Looking the "house" over, veteran political reporters were unable to spot more than a few Democrat in two of any prominence.

Former Senator Richard S. Teeling opened the meeting. Mr. Teeling talked of the recent vote and of "interference with free speech and the right of free assemblage." When he declared his belief that "the nation stood against Mr. Kenny most not and shall not be tolerated in the city of Boston and will surely be resented at the election on Tuesday," there were affirmative calls from all over the Temple.

Mr. Teeling introduced as the presiding officer Former United States District Attorney Joseph A. Dennison, whose grace and eloquence have been absent all too long from the public platforms of this town.

Mr. Dennison got the ovation all for himself and another when he first mentioned the candidate.

But Mr. Dennison made no attempt to be oratorical. He got down to brass tacks and in plain English, of which he is a master, told sober-minded Bostonians of the danger that confronts them in the candidacy of a Curley.

With the exception of James L. Connolly, the writer, none of the speakers called Curley by name. Mr. Dennison spoke of him invariably as "Mr. Kenny's opponent." The other speakers apparently took their cue from the chairman. The crowd appeared to like it.

"In fifteen years as an observer of things political in this city," Mr. Dennison said, in part, "I have never known an occasion when men were called upon to act from their hearts and their consciences and their intelligence as they are called upon in this campaign."

Mr. Dennison sketched the career of Mr. Kenny, from office boy to leading lawyer. He told of his long record in the public service and of his standing among men.

Then said Mr. Kenny's friend, Mr. Dennison, "a relic of the old-fashioned type, although he is only fifty, who has the right to say to the young men of the political charlatan and demagogue: 'You shall not pass.' I am to acknowledge that Tom Kenny is old-fashioned. (Applause.)

"Mr. Kenny will not quail, and will not tolerate, an attack upon the private life and the character of his opponent.

"The public record and the public life of Mr. Kenny's opponent have, however, been fairly placed before you.

"No one gainsays the ability and energy of Mr. Kenny's opponent, but no citizen of this city can appreciate the ideals of good government, and who understands the character of the organization that has established many years ago in Ward 17, no man who appreciates what his election would mean to the children of our schools, can consider him for one moment as a Mayor of Boston. (Great applause.)

Mr. Dennison made a powerful plea to the anti-machine citizen, who cannot bring himself to vote for Kenny and fails to give fifteen minutes on election day to his solemn duty to his city. He made it plain that under the new charter there is no such thing as political party in voting. The ballot will be called upon Republicans and Progressives to join hands with the clean young Democrats who have identified themselves with the Kenny candidacy.

KENNY ENDS CAMPAIGN WITH SOLEMN PROMISE

Following is the speech of Thomas J. Kenny, candidate for Mayor, at Tremont Temple rally last evening:

Fellow Citizens—Tonight, at the close of the campaign, with the assurance that I am to be elected Mayor of Boston, I give you a promissory note.

1—I promise I will endeavor to reduce the tax rate, not by the false economy of cutting out any of the essentials of good public service, or by discharging worthy and necessary employes, but by putting the administration on a sound business basis; in other words, by getting 100 cents of value for every dollar spent.

2—I promise I will require the street commissioners, acting in conjunction with representatives of business and civic associations, to study and formulate a comprehensive plan of street improvements which shall cover the needs of the next ten years, state the amount required to finance the plan and distribute the payments for each year of the period.

3—I promise I will have the streets kept in better condition, and I believe in a liberal expenditure of money to this end.

TO SECURE BEST MAN.

4—I promise I will have at the head of the supply department the best man available and instruct him to standardize the city's purchases, meanwhile procuring additional authority for the supply department so that it shall become the purchasing agency of all the city departments.

5—I promise I will insist upon the public advertisement of contracts.

6—I promise, I will establish that all contracts be awarded fairly and without discrimination.

7—I promise I will establish the merit system in the various departments, so that promotions and increases of compensation shall be based upon merit records, thereby improving discipline and increasing efficiency.

8—I promise I will originate this budget, after a thorough study of departmental needs in conjunction with the heads of departments, and I will require all proposed increases in compensation to be stated in the estimates, so that no increases shall be made during the year, except those which have been provided for in the budget.

9—I promise I will extend the present partial "pay-as-you-go" policy so that the cost of those public improvements which are annually recurrent shall be met as far and as rapidly as possible from taxation, to the end that the increase in debt and interest charges shall be checked and eventually reduced. At present the city is paying annually on account of debt one-fifth of the total amount raised by taxation.

PLEDGED TO HONESTY

By the means which I have described and by all other honorable means, I pledge myself, if elected, to perform honestly, impartially and to the best of my ability the tasks imposed by law and by sound custom upon the City's Chief Executive to the end that the moral and material interests of the city shall be promoted, and that justice shall be established between the citizens and their government. In the final analysis, the issue has come to this:

Do you want it understood all over the country that the City of Boston has fallen into the hands of leadership which stands for everything opposed to good government, which stands for the use of the tax-payers' money to build up a personal political machine, which stands for a return of the old discredited days, rotten with corruption, waste and inefficiency?

I appeal to every citizen of Boston who has the fair name and reputation of this city at heart to stand shoulder to shoulder with me in this contest. I ask you do you want to see the city turned over to a gang of unscrupulous politicians?

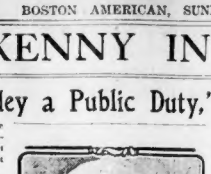
You must recognize that in the next ten years Boston will either advance as a great port in this country or will go back. There are many other matters of great importance which I would like to take up with you tonight. I regard it as very important that there be a reapportionment of the metropolitan tax. The city of Boston is compelled by law under the present departments to pay 43 per cent of the total assessment for metropolitan service. Today, Boston bears a far larger proportion than any other city or town in the metropolitan district. As Mayor of Boston I shall fight vigorously to the Legislature for the reapportionment of the metropolitan tax.

"Defeat of Curley a Public Duty," Says Brackett

John Q. A. Brackett, one of the few living ex-Governors of Massachusetts in an interview last night, on the majority fight said:

At this time, when the city of New York has just repudiated Tammany Hall, which stands for all that is worst in American politics, for Boston to elect as its mayor a man whose political ideals and methods are the same as those of Tammany Hall, and who has shown his admiration of that notorious organization by naming his political organization "the Tammany Club" would be a lasting disgrace to the city.

While not a voter in Boston, as a citizen of Massachusetts I am interested in maintaining the good name of its capital city, which would be immeasurably impaired should it appear at the election on Tuesday that a majority of the voters of Boston were in favor of Tammanyism, with all that the name implies.



EX-GOV. J. Q. A. BRACKETT.

It is clearly the duty of all good citizens, to whatever party they may belong, to exercise that right at this crisis in the city's affairs, and thereby to do their part towards averting the calamity which threatens the reputation and the best interests of Boston.

The Boston AMERICAN has taken a most commendable stand in this contest. It has done splendid work for the cause of good government. I was particularly impressed with the editorial in Friday's issue concerning Curley's Tammany methods. It sounded a warning that should be heeded by every right-thinking citizen.

The greatest danger on Tuesday will be the indifference of many voters. Some Republicans may not take the trouble to go to the polls because they may view the situation as simply a fight between two Democrats. Those who thus fail to perform their public duty will commit a grave error. They will be jeopardizing the best interests of their city and will have cause for regret that they did not do their part in safeguarding those interests.

MAJOR HIGGINSON WOULD ELECT KENNY TO HELP BOSTON

Major Higginson, introduced by Mr. Dennison as "Boston's first citizen" got a tremendous reception. Mr. Higginson made it plain that he is for Kenny, not to help Kenny so much as to help Boston. "If Mr. Kenny is beaten," he said, "it will be your fault, you men and women who are here tonight. You can elect Kenny if you want to, and I know you want to."

John P. Leahy declared that it would be a shameful thing if 100,000 of our citizens do not come out and vote to sustain the things for which we are fighting.

Mr. Leahy spoke of the program of Noise and Conversation on the Curley side, the loud talk that "nothing can beat him," "he's won," and "the betting favors him."

Speaking of which Noise and Conversation, Mr. Leahy declared that "you cannot sit at the feet of Mother Nature and not learn the great lesson of Eternity, "that every great force which moves the world moves in Silence." (Applause and laughter.)

CONNOLLY EXPOSES CURLEY.

James B. Connolly declared that "no true lover of Boston wants to show his city to the nation next Tuesday night with both its eyes blackened."

Mr. Connolly, analyzing the Curley votes, showed that Mr. Curley had never been a vote-getter. He told how he (Connolly) had lately been approached by paid Curley workers with the promise that if he would keep still in this contest, and not expose the Curley methods, he could go to Congress next time without a fight.

Connolly laid bare the Curley methods of fighting, telling of an eminent Bostonian who, because he once opposed Curley in print, was published in the world as a "white slaver."

Nobody who knows the man took the foul charge seriously, Mr. Connolly said, but there were those who do not know him.

This man, meeting Curley, asked him why he had made such a horrible accusation against him.

CURLEY PUTS IN BIGGEST NIGHT OF HIS CAMPAIGN

Congressman James M. Curley put in the biggest rally night of his campaign last night with five district rallies and a final gathering at Symphony Hall, the auditorium of which was jammed to the doors.

Curley's principal assistant speakers were Congressman Henry Bernard of Missouri and Lieutenant-Governor Edward P. Barry.

These were with him at Symphony Hall. Others who held the audiences until the candidate arrived, included John F. McDonald of the Curley campaign force, Dr. Joseph Sandonato and Edward B. Callender.

The candidate started out by addressing an open-air rally at D street and Broadway, South Boston. Thence he went to the Ward 14 Democratic Club at Broadway and Emerson street.

CHEERED AT COURTHOUSE.

Next he was cheered at Dorchester courthouse. From there he went to Dudley Street Opera House, where Representative James Kenney of Ward 21 presided. The house was packed. Among the speakers were Clarence W. Bowers, Ward 11, attorney; Frank Selberlich of Ward 22, Senator Francis J. Horgan and School Board candidates.

But the big rally was at Symphony Hall. The first thing Curley did was to announce his change in the name of the Tammany Club to the "Pro Bono Publico Club."

While the audience was gasping at that, Curley continued in part:

"It has been stated from the stump and also by the Boston Transcript editorially that I was not held in high esteem by my colleagues in Congress and that, to use the Transcript's expression, I was a political blot in Washington."

REFERS TO BORLAND.

"Without wishing to appear conceited, I have living proof that just the opposite is true. Congressman Borland has told you tonight in his own words what opinion is held of me in Washington. Congressman Scott Ferris would have been here, too, but with grip packed he was taken from the train to go back to the bedside of a stricken wife.

"It has been stated that I was not in high esteem with Champ Clark, Speaker of the House, and others high in national affairs. I have in mind a letter from Mr. Clark, addressed to the Honorable John F. McDonald. It was brought to Mr. McDonald personally by the hand of Bennett Clark, who is House Parliamentarian and the son of Champ Clark."

Curley then read the letter, endorsing the Curley campaign.

CURLEY WANTED MEN TO LOSE THEIR POSITIONS

James Donovan, former superintendent of Streets, made a remarkable statement last night which throws a strong sidelight on the charcter and political methods of James M. Curley, candidate for Mayor.

It will be remembered that Mr. Donovan was for four years in absolute control of a great majority of those in the city's employ. For years there have been certain unwritten rules in political life which controlled the action of political fights. One of those rules was that no politician should seek to take away the livelihood of a man in the city's employ or elsewhere, by depriving him of his job because he did not agree with him in politics. This was considered striking below the belt.

During the four years of Mr. Donovan's political supremacy, he was the man through whom any foul blow like this must be delivered. And Mr. Donovan makes the extraordinary statement that during those years he does not recall that a single man in Democratic politics ever asked him to remove an employe of the City Hall, or one of the city laborers, except James M. Curley.

CURLEY THE ONLY ONE.

Mr. Donovan said:

"It was not believed to be good politics or good political morals to deprive a man, and perhaps his wife and children, of their bread and butter merely because he was not with you in politics. It was considered one thing to get a friend a job and quite another thing to deprive somebody else of a job merely to punish him. No Democratic leader, in my recollection, ever asked me to chop off the head of a man out of pure revenge except Mr. Curley. He was persistently after me to chop off the heads of men who did not do his political bidding.

"This was true of Mayor Fitzgerald and also the other leaders that I can remember, except Mr. Curley, whose vindictiveness seemed to me almost unaccountable."

REFUSED TO PROMISE.

In contrast Mr. Kenny at the very outset of this campaign refused to promise Former Representative Murphy of South Boston and a delegation who accompanied Mr. Murphy to interview Mr. Kenny that he would remove Joseph Norton if he were elected. Mr. Kenny replied to the request:

I will make no such promise. If removing men to satisfy private revenge is the price of the office of Mayor, it is too high a price for me to pay.

Port Board Favors Car Float System

Tunnel Plan Is Rejected as Too Expensive.

In his report to the Legislature upon the use of water terminals and railroad connections the Directors of the Port consider various plans for improving the freight connections between the railroads and the ships at the docks.

The idea of a system of tunnels between the various railroads and the South Boston and East Boston waterfronts is put out of question by the cost, which is estimated at more than eighteen million dollars.

As the most practicable solution the board favors a car float system, such as has been developed at New York.

Stop Stomach Worries Now

And Use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets So That You Can Digest Each Meal Quickly and At the Same Time Renew Your Digestive Strength.

Learn once again how to smile and laugh, and stop this grouchy moodiness. This condition arises from a faulty digestion and cannot be removed unless you use common sense and assist Nature a little.

"I Am a New Man Since Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Gave Me a New Stomach and Appetite."

If the stomach is overworked, its muscles become tired and gradually grow weaker and weaker, until they are unable to take care of the food properly. The glands fail to provide the juices necessary to digest the food. Gases form and cause all sorts of pain, misery and wretchedness, as well as extreme danger to the heart.

It is then that the stomach calls for help. Ordinary medicines are impossible. They not only fail to help the stomach but injure the entire system. Medical men have studied the stomach and have discovered that the digestive juices conslst largely of pepain and nitrogenous ferments. What, then, would be more natural than to supply these properties artificially when the stomach is unable to produce them.

That is the object of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These powerful little agents relieve the stomach of its burden, thereby giving it an opportunity to regain its normal strength. They tone up, strengthen and revitalize the secretory glands, mucous membranes, absorbing glands and muscular walls. They restore to the stomach its lost powers of digestion so that it can again do its work without assistance. They contain, in a concentrated form, every element necessary to digest all sorts of food, whether acid or alkaline.

If you ever experience an oppressive feeling just inside the lower end of your breat bone and extending upward towards your heart, do not hesitate an instant. Get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from the nearest druggist at once and take one. In a few minutes the pain will leave you and you will feel better. Take a tablet after each meal for several days and your stomach will once more perform its duties. All druggists sell them at 50c a box.

COUNTY ATTORNEY A MAINE SUICIDE

Lewis C. Brown Quits Callers in Office at Houlton and Shoots Himself.

HOULTON, Me., Jan. 10.—County Attorney Lewis C. Brown of Aroostook County, one of the best-known lawyers in this section of Maine, shot and killed himself in a dramatic manner this afternoon in his office at the courthouse.

Attorney Brown had been chatting with former State Attorney-General William R. Pattangall, his father-in-law, and Judge George H. Smith of Presque Isle. Brown smiled as he said:

"Excuse me a moment, won't you?"

Then he passed into the next room. Almost immediately Attorney Pattangall and Judge Smith were startled by a rifle shot.

Both rushed into the room where Brown had gone. They found the County Attorney lying against a chair, with a rifle on the floor near his body. To the suicide's head was a gaping wound.

No cause is known for Brown's act. He had been apparently in the best of health. His business affairs were said to be in good order, and none of his friends knew of any trouble that might have led him to take his life.

Brown was thirty-five years old. He was born and reared in Presque Isle and was first elected county attorney in 1910. For the past week he had been busy with the business of the present criminal session of the court.

Urge Big Reforms in Prison System

Commission Declares Present Methods Are Inadequate.

Many sweeping reforms in the prison system of the State are contained in the annual report of the Prison Commission, submitted to the Legislature. The present system is declared to be inadequate.

Following are among the recommendations:

Segregation of defective delinquents from habitual criminals.

That authority be given prison officials to extend prompt aid in case of harsh deprivation, and provision be made for a small daily wage credit to industrious prisoners with dependants.

That judges be given the discretion to impose a sentence of twenty years or more on persons convicted of second degree murder, instead of being restricted to the imposition of a life sentence.

Report Urges New Bar to Marriage

Recommend Printing of List of "Impediments."

The State Board of Health and Insanity, in a joint report to the Legislature on an investigation of "impediments to marriage," recommend that feeble-minded persons and persons suffering from communicable diseases shall not contract marriage. The present law applies only to those insane and idiots.

The report also recommends that the Secretary of State shall be required to furnish to the clerk or registrar of every city or town a printed list of all legal impediments to marriage, and that it shall be the duty of the local officials to post it in a conspicuous place and to give all applicants for marriage licenses printed lists of such impediments.

Henry H. Sprague in Private Hospital

Chairman of Metropolitan Water Board Ill in Maine.

Henry H. Sprague, chairman of the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board, has been seriously ill in a private hospital in Maine, it became known last night. It was established that he had been suffering from a general breakdown.

The news that Chairman Sprague has been sick came as a surprise to many of his friends. He has been away from the offices of the board for about four months. At his law offices last night it was stated that he was understood to be convalescing and would return shortly to his duties. Mr. Sprague is seventy.

'Perfect Maid' 38 Years on Job

Sole Heir to Estate of $23,000

Dr. Drake Tells Why She Has Adopted Her Faithful Servant.

MATILDA BAILEY

Dr. Arathena B. Drake, eighty-six, of No. 25 G street, South Boston, has made her maid, Miss Matilda Bailey, who has been with her thirty-eight years, the sole heir to all her property. She has adopted "Tilly" to avoid legal complications that may come after her death. The property is valued at $23,000.

Dr. Drake says Miss Bailey is a perfect maid. According to the doctor a perfect maid is one:

Who attends to details.

Who knows when you need a shawl, without asking for it.

Who sees that your room is comfortable.

Who helps you to dress.

Who knows where your wraps are.

Who knows how to cook the food you like.

Who is regular in getting her meals.

Who does not waste your food.

Who knows how to keep the house clean without special instructions.

Who is honest, industrious and willing.

Who does not go to bed and shut her door before the mistress goes to bed.

Who is attentive in the smaller things of the household.

TELLS OF ADOPTION.

"Tilly has done all these things," said Dr. Drake yesterday, "so I have made her my sole heir. Whatever property I have will go to her. For more than thirty-eight years she has been with me. No one has been kinder. No one has earned what I shall leave her. I am adopting her because I want to be sure before I pass away that there will be no legal complications.

"During all these years she has tended me carefully, as a perfect maid should. If I am sitting in the room alone, and she thinks it is too cold, she throws a wrap around me. When I get up in the morning at 6 she makes sure that my room is comfortable and not too cold. She helps me to dress. She knows where my things are.

"During my meal time this same faithfulness shows itself.

SHE'S A GOOD COOK.

"She is a good cook. Her meals have always been regular. She has not wasted anything. Again and again she has saved me many dollars by her economy. My interests have been her interests.

"The house has been kept clean. There has been no slovenliness. My comfort has been her constant aim.

"Oh! there are a hundred different things she is doing for me and has been doing for years.

"Above everything else, she has been honest. When I am sick, as I have been for sixteen weeks, 'Tilly' has cared for me. In my professional duties she has shown an interest. She knows me so well that I do not have to ask her to do this or that. She knows what to do.

"In my home life, in planning and suggesting, as well as in buying, she has been my right bower.

"When I go to bed she wants to do something for my comfort. She does not precede me to bed and go into her room and shut the door. That's not the habit of my Tilly. She waits for me and looks after me as well in my old age that I have learned to depend upon her, and find that no one is so well entitled to what I shall leave as she is."

Miss Bailey, who is well known in the neighborhood as "Tilly," said:

"The doctor has always been kind to me. She is not hard to please.

"We never had any trouble. She is so kind and tells you what to do in such a way that you like to do it. She advised me what to do in my own life and I have always found her to be a true friend. I would do anything for her. I am glad to be adopted by her, for I am alone."

POLICE DIFFER IN STORIES OF FIGHT

Row Aired at Hearing on Cedarcrest Club Attempted Bribery Case.

Patrolman Henry Dugan of Braintree and Patrolman John D. Walsh of East Weymouth came into direct contradiction on the witness stand before the Weymouth Selectmen yesterday, on a hearing on charges against Walsh, growing out of the recent raid on the Cedarcrest Club of Braintree.

After conducting testimony the secretem took the case under advisement.

Walsh testified Dugan knocked him down. Dugan testified Walsh had a hemorrhage, fell against Dugan and knocked him down.

Walsh said that, when he and Dugan were at the Cedarcrest Club, Dugan drank out of a bottle and offered Walsh a drink, which he refused. Dugan testified Walsh and Mrs. D. Grace Reynolds offered him a drink but he didn't take any.

Walsh is tried on five counts as follows:

Being away from his post of duty on the nights of November 14 and 15 last.

Being under the influence of liquor.

Being at the Cedarcrest Club on the nights of November 13 and 14 and demanding money.

Being at the Cedarcrest Club in violation of the police rules.

Being in a fight with Officer Dugan.

The charges are the outcome of the testimony of Mrs. D. Grace Reynolds in the Quincy Court, that officer Dugan demanded that she "come across" with money, saying that he would "fix it up." Walsh on the stand today denied that he had any part in Dugan's alleged demand for money.

Millionaire's Son Teaches Tango Here

Was Central Figure at Hotel Westminster Last Night.

John Fox, son of a Milwaukee millionaire and cousin of Melville Stone, head of the Associated Press, has turned dancing master to earn "pin money" while studying law in Boston.

Young Fox astonished the folks at home by making his own way after his allowance had been cut off owing to a little disagreement. Last night he was the central figure at the society hop at the Hotel Westminster where he demonstrated the tango and other modern dancing specialities.

"I call it good fun," said he last night. "Too much rush just now and I want to show the folks back home that I am not altogether dependent."

102 Men Called in Ballot Probe

Grand Jury to Name Fraud Charges Tomorrow.

Summonses were issued yesterday on the order of District Attorney Pelletier and Assistant District Attorney D. V. Melesae for 102 men to appear before the Grand Jury on Monday to testify of alleged frauds on mayoralty nomination papers.

These men will be asked if they had taken oaths before a justice of the peace or a notary public that the names on Curley and Kenny papers were correct, and in the cases where the names appear as signers of nomination papers the men will be asked if they had signed the paper and can identify the signature in the paper as their own.

On Wednesday the Grand Jury will examine a hundred more names. There will be no session of the Grand Jury on Tuesday, election day.

Lieutenant Rooney, attached to the district attorney's office, and a number of police inspectors have been working on the cases several days.

Both District Attorney Pelletier and Assistant District Attorney McIsaac will be in the Grand Jury room during the investigation. The charges are that not only are the burials fake, but that the names signed to the papers are forgeries and in some cases the burials are of persons who are not dead.

Six Progressive 'Traitors' Ousted

State Committee Acts in Contest on Speakership.

The six Progressive Representatives who deserted their party candidate for Speaker of the House and made possible the re-election of Grafton D. Cushing, Republican, were formally read out of the Progressive Party at the annual meeting of the Progressive State Committee last night.

Resolutions denouncing the six as "traitors" were adopted by a practically unanimous vote after many speeches of condemnation not only for their votes in the speakership fight, but also for their votes which gave the control of the committees of the House to the Republicans.

Matthew Hale was re-elected chairman of the State Committee, after resolutions offered by Miss Eden L. Spencer of Cambridge, attacking Hale as a "boss," had been voted down. The other officers were re-elected.

The six Progressive Representatives read out of the party are James M. Lyle of Gloucester, Cleveland A. Chandler of East Bridgewater, Alfred N. Fessenden of Townsend, Charles H. Webster of North-field, Fred W. Cross of Royalston, and George F. Briggs of Lexington.

FREE TUNNEL UP TO VOTER TUESDAY

Abolition of tolls on the East Boston tunnel will be put before the people of Boston on the ballot Tuesday.

If Boston votes "yes" on the proposition to abolish the one cent toll now in force, no more will the solitary copper be required in addition to the regular nickel for transportation between Boston proper and its island ward.

CITY WILL SUTTLE.

Under the provisions of a bill passed by the Legislature with a referendum attached, Boston is given permission until 1923 to pay $125,000 annually for free transportation through the tunnel. That sum represents about what the Elevated has been getting yearly on East Boston tunnel tolls in 1917 the tolls collected amounted to $114,774.41.

The expense of collection was $20,000. This left the Elevated a net surplus of $124,000 to be deducted as interest charges on tunnel bonds. If Boston votes for the abolition of the rent toll to East Boston, the $125,000 is expected annually to compensate the holders of tunnel bonds from any default on their interest payments. They are expected to waive their claim to interest.

"YES" OR "NO" AGAIN.

Besides the free tunnel question, Boston voters will decide on Tuesday the old familiar question of whether Boston shall remain a "wet" or "dry" town.

Then there are two other referendum questions on the ballot. Boston voters will determine whether workingmen's compensation act shall apply to mechanics, workmen and laborers who may be injured in public employment.

So, too, Boston will decide whether it desires an eight-hour day for public employees or not.

URGE ARBITRATION IN MINE STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Arbitration as a means of settling the long struggle between the mine owners and the strikers in the Michigan copper district is advocated in a report submitted to the department of labor and endorsed by that bureau today. The report is based on information gathered by commissioners.

Their suggestions are:

"First—A mutual settlement between mine owners and representatives of mine workers.

"Second—Arbitration by a disinterested board.

"Third—Arbitration by a board on which one member of the Western Federation of Miners shall serve.

"Fourth—Reinstatement of all strikers and the publication of facts from time to time of effort.

With the endorsement of the suggestions, the Department of Labor calls attention to the fact that they have been accepted by representatives of the miners but were rejected by the mine owners.

Dr. Kelly Attacked by Medical Faculty

BALTIMORE, Jan. 10.—Dr. Howard A. Kelly, whose successful treatment of cancer of radium has recently aroused considerable attention, has been charged with violating medical ethics by the medical and chirurgical faculty of Maryland. The executive committee of the faculty today forwarded to Dr. Kelly a letter, demanding that he explain the "unprofessional publicity" he has been receiving in the newspapers.

Dr. Kelly's fellow surgeons here declared that professional jealousy was behind the attack.

OPENS UP NOSTRILS, CLEARS HEAD, ENDS COLDS OR CATARRH AT ONCE

Instantly Relieves Swollen, Inflamed Nose, Head, Throat—You Breathe Freely—Dull Headache Goes—Nasty Discharge Stops.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it. Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open, you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils, penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membranes which cause the trouble. Relief for stuffed throat, clears the air passages, stops nasty discharge and ends dropping of offending, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't go on snuffling, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold with its running, watery nose will breathe into the throat and sore dryness is distressing, but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm," and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

GIRL SUES BACK BAY DOCTOR FOR JILT

"Old Hunky Dory" Love Letters to "Honeybunch" Fervid Exhibit in $10,000 Breach of Promise Action Here

Blanche M. Giles of Allston Says Dr. Moore Called Her His "$10,000 Beauty" and Hopes Suit Will Cost Similar Sum

BURNING love letters from "Old Hunkadory" to his beloved "Honeybunch" tell the story of the rosy heyday of the romance of a well known Back Bay physician for an Allston girl before their romance was shattered by the filing of a suit and unromantic breach of promise suit.

"Old Hunkadory" is Dr. John [illegible] Moore of Boylston street, a [illegible] physician, medical examiner for a big insurance company and a leader in medical circles. His "dear little Honeybunch" is [illegible] Blanche M. Giles of No. 1[illegible] Chelsea avenue, Allston, a [illegible] Chic brunette.

[illegible] the world was all roses and [illegible] for "Hunkadory" and his [illegible]bunch." It was in these [illegible] days that Miss Giles claims [illegible] Moore wrote her the love letters [illegible] in the Sunday AMERICAN prints today.

In the letters "Old Hunkadory" [illegible] little "Honeybunch" has $10,[illegible] [illegible]

"Yes, I [illegible] am the $10,000 [illegible] Miss Giles said tonight. "That's [illegible] amount I've sued him for for breaking me."

PET NAMES FOR EACH.

Young Hanan Tries on Fiancee's Hat

He Lost a Bet, But She Only Wanted an $8 One.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Jan. 10. It may be that trying on his fiancee's hat and letting her size it up is the latest thing for mere man to do Anyway, Talbot Smith Hanan, son of Mrs. John Hanan, did it when he went with his fiancee, Miss Perkins, to a milliner's. Young Hanan first tested the hats on his own head. One his betrothed picked out—a black leather toque worth $8. It was explained the couple had made a bet which the young man would first choose a hat, and modestly picked the toque when her fiancee told her she could have the best that money could buy. Miss Perkins is a guest of Mr. Hanan. Another guest is the Duke de Mayor Durasso.

Ask Why Portsmouth Lost Policewoman

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Jan. 10. Why was Vera Virginia Bash, the first and only woman "cop" on the Portsmouth police force, discharged?

Some say her name was too romantic. Others say she was too pretty. Still more fear she was too stylish.

Chief Michael F. Hurley isn't telling why. Miss Bash got her job through the Civic League. She was a stenographer. The day she went on duty. Now the head of the Suffrage Department in Chicago wants to know why Vera Virginia Bash didn't make good as a feminine bluecoat.

Chief Hurley got a letter today from Chicago asking the whys and wherefores.

HOUSEWIFE GRATEFUL TO PERUNA.

I Hope Other Suffering Women will Give Peruna a Trial as I Have Done

Mrs. J. F. Summitt.

Mrs. James F. Summitt, 1008 East 8th St., Muscatine, Iowa, writes "It has been some time since you have heard from me, but I am getting along all right. You may ask my permission to publish my testimonial. Certainly you may. I will send a photo with this mail and hope my testimonial will be of benefit to many mothers, for Peruna has surely done wonders for me. I will answer each and every letter sent to me.

"I recommended Peruna to a friend of mine whose daughter was suffering with a very severe case of bronchitis and the doctor did not do her any good, so I told her mother about Peruna and she began giving it to her daughter. Now she is well and strong and working every day.

"We are still using Peruna whenever we need it in our family. We would not be without it. My husband's health is much improved by its use. Also, I have used it with great results. Peruna has cured me, I hope other suffering women will give Peruna a trial."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

BAD COLD? YOUR HEAD STUFFED?

"Pape's Cold Compound" gives quick relief—Contains no quinine.

Take Pape's Cold Compound every two hours until you have taken three doses. Then all stuffy misery goes and your cold will be broken. Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling. Ease your throbbing head—nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as Pape's Cold Compound, which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice and causes no inconvenience. Accept no substitutes.

Mrs. Sanborn's Story of Broken Romance Heiress Is Willing to Sacrifice Herself

First Met Future Husband in Innocent Flirtation at Newport

MRS. FLORENCE WOLCOTT SANBORN.

Mrs. Florence Wolcott Sanborn, the Natick heiress who is seeking the annulment of her husband's divorce, told yesterday for the first time the story of her love for Robert Sanborn and of how later her romance was shattered on the rocks of domestic [illegible]

[illegible] attractive Natick girl is fighting for the custody of her two-year-old son Robert Wolcott, she told of how her wedding resulted from a flirtation at Newport, and how she was disillusioned on her honeymoon to Southern Europe. Then she exclaimed:

"If this case of mine ever comes to trial I'll show my husband up whatever may be the sacrifice to myself."

NOT IN SECLUSION.

Mrs. Sanborn was found by a AMERICAN reporter. She is living with her son in a nearby suburb. Her whereabouts is unknown to her counsel and the lawyers. She denied that she was living in seclusion, as has been stated.

"And I want it understood that I am in very good health" she said.

"All my troubles began with a innocent flirtation at Newport," she went on. "My husband was then twice and I was only eighteen. He was stopping at the same hotel and all the girls in my set were fascinated with him. Naturally I fell for his [illegible] and he showed me out for [illegible] attention.

"Papa never cared for Mr. Sanborn from the first. He always said he was 'an adventurer' and as I [illegible] I married against the wishes of my parents.

"As soon as we were married we left for Europe on our honeymoon.

UNHAPPY HONEYMOON.

"It was unwise, but a [illegible] honeymoon for me. Almost as soon as we were wedded my sorrows began. Papa had given me a [illegible] allowance and as soon as Sanborn got it he gave up all work.

"After arriving at Rome we bought a horse and [illegible] and [illegible] stages to Marseilles [illegible] and other places on the [illegible] journey. I was with Mr. Sanborn and we lived a [illegible] and [illegible] together. Finally Robert [illegible] was born.

"When Robert was two months old I left my husband. I went to [illegible] home of friends in New Jersey.

"I learned that Sanborn had [illegible] been an actor on the stage.

"Mr. Sanborn [illegible] to keep for [illegible] or about 45 past. He [illegible] ever he may have learned [illegible] to the effect that I was [illegible] satisfaction of the court at the proper time. If this case ever comes to trial, I'll show him up as [illegible] sacrifice to myself.

"Mr. Sanborn, borrowed the child three years ago for a visit. For three years he kept Bobby from me, for nearly a whole year I didn't know where he was. Bobby now has a French nurse or governess and is living in luxury on the Cabin Hill. A perfect image of his father.

"Bobby is an awful [illegible] and he [illegible] several [illegible] [illegible] suit against him. All I want is Bobby, and enough to [illegible] him decently. If he does not agree to this, then I will show him up in court, and that is just what he wishes to avoid.

"The reason that we left Brooklyn was because the landlady where we were stopping disliked children. Bobby was too much for her, and I am in the best of health, and go motoring every day. No, I haven't [illegible] our visitors. After my one experience [illegible] I can hardly [illegible] to marry again. [illegible] I guess there will be no further trouble about Mrs. Sanborn getting her $25 a week so long as we keep [illegible] matter out of the courts.

IF FEDERALS HAVE ENOUGH CAPITAL THEY WILL MAKE THIRD LEAGUE SUCCESSFOL

Room for Another Big Baseball Organization in the Federal [illegible] Cities

If the promoters of the Federal League are equipped with sufficient capital and persistance, the great "Third League" movement is likely to succeed either this year or later.

Why?

Just because of the immutable law of supply and demand.

The old league magnates are in a near-panic over the Federal League because they know that there is a demand for a Third League. It has only waited until it men with sufficient capital and courage were willing to launch a Third League, or something else that would fill the want, and go through with it.

If the conditions in the cities where it is proposed to establish the Third League will convince you of the demand for the proposed new factor in "big league" baseball, in some town or other.

Here are the cities where the Federal League proposes to establish club: [illegible] with their population.

UCCESS OF MOTOR SHOW MOST MARKED

ll Signs Presage Return of Business Confidence and Greater Prosperity Than Has Been Experienced for Years

By J. C. KERRISON.

It has often been said that the motor industry is the first to feel the effects of business depression and the last to enjoy the fruits of renewed prosperity. If such be too case, then the country at large is on the eve of a most prosperous year; that is, if one should accept the reading of the business barometer at the motor show which closed in New York yesterday.

This barometer is indicative of a return of business prosperity, renewed business confidence, and gives signs of still greater activity in all lines of business. It is true that two or three months ago there was a atmosphere of doubt in the motor industry, but this has given way to a feeling laden with signs of a wonderful year of prosperity.

The manufacturers, dealers and others in attendance at the show are all delighted with the experiences there. Th sales were greater than was anticipated, which surely can be taken as indicative of increased business confidence. No one, it is said, buys automobiles, and especially high priced ones, when they are feeling ill in the pocketbook, or they do buy them when business is looking up and full of promise.

BABY'S BODY BROKE OUT IN ECZEMA

Came Out in Pimples. Little Body One Mass of Sores. Couldn't Sleep Nights or Days. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Salem, Depot, N. H.—"My baby was only two weeks old when his whole body broke out. They called it eczema. The eczema came out in pimples and filled with a fluid. They would form a scab as the places healed, so that he would peel. His little body was one mass of sores. He was very comfortable and couldn't sleep more than a few days. He was that way while the eczema lasted.

"I was given an ointment to use but it didn't do him any good so I got the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed him with the Cuticura Soap then, and had washed him I would put on the Cuticura Ointment carefully and I found he was getting better. In a week at this there was a big change and in a month's time he was cured and now is well and I know he will have no trouble." (Signed) Mrs. Ethel Bellas, May 17, 1913.

Although the Cuticura Soap and Ointment are most successful in the treatment of affections of the skin, scalp, hair and hands they are also most valuable for every day use in the toilet, bath and nursery to cause first suspicious of pimples, to maintain the health of the skin, hair and hands from infancy to age. Cuticura Soap [illegible] and Cuticura Ointment [illegible] Soap are sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free with 32-p Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Naming Our New Cup Defender

Copyright, 1914, by the Boston American. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

EDITOR City Life Section. Esteemed Sir—I note with much interest the various attempts thus far made to select an appropriate name for our new cup defender.

For many years I was second mate on a canal boat (having married the captain's widow), and before that I used to have charge of a steamer in a clam canning factory. I have guided many schooners across that terrible shoal, "Mahogany Bar," and so I feel qualified to address you concerning this momentous matter.

I note some one has suggested naming her "September Morn." Without a name I think she could barely win, however, that name being more appropriate for a craft with her rigging blown away.

Another person (some joker) suggests "Philadelphia." How absurd! We do not want our defender asleep in the deep. This matter should be taken up in all seriousness. The person who suggested "Vivian" forgets that both Imogene and Hortense might be offended at this. The fresh guy who wants to call her "Gardenia" probably thinks she is going to sail around in a buttonhole.

I know you will think I am difficult to please, and fear I may offend some of the good folks who got brain fag trying to think up a name, but while "Suffragette" is a smashing good name, I leave it to you if it wouldn't be unfair, since the English cannot get ahead of them.

"Water Fox" seems foolish to me. The party who suggested it probably didn't think of "Land Fish," which would be quite as appropriate. Then there is "Winsome." That will never do. We want to win all. "Molly Pitcher" might do were it not that the English might name their boat the "Baker" and make a home run. And the idea of naming her the "Miles Standish"—the John Alden might go in and cop the prize.

"Clover Leaf" another begs to name her. As for myself I think there's more spirit in "Clover Club." Better call her "Whiskey Straight," because it goes to the head so speedily. I also object to calling her "Statesman," for it should be remembered that our cup defender is no joke.

And now I suppose many will read this and say: "Well, why doesn't that smart guy Wyndejhammer suggest some better names?" Very well, I will do so, and I am sure every one will agree with me that there is at least some reason in my suggestions. Here are a few:

CABBAGE—Bound to get a head.
INDEBTEDNESS—You can't get ahead of it.
STORAGE EGG—Hart to beat.
HIGHCOSTOFLIVING—Gaining every minute.
SLIT SKIRT—Always showing her heels.
BOOZER—Never drops the cup.
WASHINGTON—Put it all over the English.
JOY RIDER—Never stops for anything.
TANGO—Won't stop at anything.
JOKE—Beyond an Englishman.

Trusting these few suggestions find you the same, I remain,

Yours respectfully,

COMMODORE WYNDEJHAMMER.

Referee, Jack Marks, Montreal. Umpires, Jim Patterson and Jack Marks, Montreal. Time of periods, 20 minutes each. Timekeeper, Ed Wright. Penalty timekeeper, Dr. Wright. Goal judges, Dr. Wright and Walter Tuttle. Time of game, 1 hour.

By the most stirring rally ever seen in a hockey game in Boston, the B. A. A. seven defeated the Victorias of Montreal, 3 to 2, at the Boston Arena last evening.

The game was hard fought from the moment the whistle blew. Six minutes before the finish the Victorias had two goals, the B. A. A. none. In those six minutes the B. A. A. scored three goals and victory. It was wonderful playing on the part of the Boston boys, for they were fighting against a clever team that was at times playing five men on the defence.

[illegible] was tried by the [illegible] and illegal body [illegible] more than fourteen men [illegible] off ice by the officials [illegible] the game. [illegible] other occasions the B. A. A. had the puck when the referee's whistle sounded, but the goal was not allowed. It reminded one of a touchdown in a football game, nearly all of the players were piled up in a heap, several being inside the net.

LAW A GREAT GOAL TENDER.

Had it not been for the wonderful work of Law, the Victorias goal tender, the score would have been much larger. Law was one of the best goal tenders seen here this season. He had four stops to his credit, most of them being accomplished in a sensational manner. Osgood and Foote, the Victorias' rushing pair, were also conspicuous.

The B. A. A. boys put up a good defensive game, Captain Clifford and Hicks playing the defence for the Victorias kept the local players from getting a good shot at the goal. The boys did get the puck down the ice. They were forced to take to shots.

The B. A. A. were outpassed both backwards and time and time again men would go down the ice, only to be stopped by the great defensive work of Hicks. Watt, who was good, Fredrie Huntington, Foster and Clifford being after the game at all times.

Watt, the star right wing who leads the City League of Montreal for goals, was the star of the Victorias, for Bignell, Monatt and Patterson displayed good form.

The Montreal players did much to upset and hinder with their attack but most times did it in such a clever fashion that they did not draw penalties.

The game started off with both teams playing cautiously. Much of the play centred in neutral ice the first five minutes, but after that the game speeded up.

After several [illegible] of play the B. A. A. caged the rubber, but Referee Foster blew his whistle for a forward pass. After eleven minutes of play Montreal caged its first goal. Watt the right wing, took a shot at long range from the right. Canterbury made a good stop but Watt had followed up the shot and made a wild grab at the puck. The force of the [illegible] stick against Canterbury's skates took him off his feet, and the puck went in for the first goal of the game.

It was just fifty-six seconds later when the same player scored again, and the followers of the Canadian team went wild. This time Watt did some very clever dodging and dribbling, carrying the puck from behind his own goal and making a fine shot from the right.

For the remainder of the half the Canadians played five men on the defence, and the B. A. A. forwards

DOMINICK MULRENAN, WOBURN YOUTH WHO SIGNS WITH RED SOX

RED SOX SIGN A WOBURN LAD

Dominick T. Mulrenan, a 19 Year Old Pitcher, Will Go South With Carrigan's Men.

Dominick J. Mulrenan of Woburn Mass., yesterday signed a contract with the Red Sox and will go South with the team in March.

Mulrenan was born and brought up in Woburn, attending the schools there and in 1911 and 1912 pitched for the Woburn High School team, in 1911 he won for the Woburn High School the championship of the Mystic Valley League, not losing a game. The following year, in the same league, he led the league in hitting and pitched ten and a twelve-inning game winning both.

The past season he played with Marlboro, Lynnfield and the All-Woburn teams, all semi-professional organizations. Mulrenan has won two-thirds of the games he has pitched while playing semi-professional baseball.

Mulrenan throws and bats right-handed. He is nineteen years old, weighs 185 pounds and is five feet eleven inches tall.

The player was recommended to the Red Sox by Scout Putney Donovan, who has seen him pitch several games.

Mulrenan worked out at Fenway Park one morning last August, and everyone who saw him liked his style of pitching.

Gibbons and Packey Sign for Battle

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—Packey M. Farland and Mike Gibbons have been matched to meet in a ten-round bout in Madison Square Garden New York, in February. The men have agreed to weigh in at 145 pounds at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the fight.

The contest should be a brilliant affair, as McFarland and Gibbons are considered the most scientific boxers in the world. Packey has always claimed that he is a legitimate lightweight, but by signing to clash with Gibbons at 145 pounds he stamps himself as a welterweight. The weight for the match, moreover, is three notches above the welterweight limit, which is 142 pounds ringside.

A PICTURE OF A TYPICAL OLD FRIENDSHIP BROKEN BY [illegible]

Head of National Commission Declares That Organized Baseball Will Use Money to Beat Federals and Break Up League

SUMMARY OF DAY'S NEWS IN THE BASEBALL WAR

Ned Hanlon, head of the Baltimore Federals, was reported in the East on the trail of Pitcher George Tyler, the Braves' star southpaw, in an effort to sign a contract. Tyler said that he would sign a Boston contract.

Jimmy Scheckard, ex-Cub outfielder, signed to manage the Pittsburgh Federals.

President Herrmann of the National Commission declared war on the Federals. Said that organized baseball would "meet money with money." If the Federals go, any signed-up majors, the majors will outbid the Feds to get all the old stars back. A war of millions is promised.

President James E. Gaffney of the Boston Nationals yesterday gave the Federal League until June 1 to "bust." Garry Herrmann, president of the National League, declared that the magnates had agreed to "meet money with money." Scheckard, the former outfielder, "jumped" to sign up as manager of the Pittsburgh Federals, and Ned Hanlon, head of the Baltimore "Feds," made an unsuccessful attempt to get Pitcher George A. Tyler, star southpaw of the Boston Nationals.

These were the outstanding features of baseball war in the National League circles yesterday. "We are very slightly changed
From the semi-apes who ranged India's prehistoric day,
Who drew the biggest bat
Ran his brother down, you know,
Is the one goes down today."

One man when he wishes to get something sits down and longs for it, while the other follow pulls his belt up a hole tighter and goes out after it.

And sport is like life, just as life is like sport; it doesn't do any good to long for things unless you are willing to work hard for them, too. Life is not so two-sided that one can do nothing along half heartedly in sport and expect to be changed in the twinkling of an eye into some other kind of an individual with patience and perseverance and pluck to work when it comes to the serious side of making your way in the world.

REVIEW OF REAL ESTATE MARKET OF PAST WEEK

Characteristic Dullness of Season in Evidence in Every Realty Market Branch.

BIG WEST ROXBURY SALE

Dullness characteristic of the real estate market at the present season of the year prevailed every branch of the business during the past week. The number of sales recorded was lighter than that for a number of weeks.

Brokers have no reason to complain, however, for from the standpoint of the dollar the past week [illegible] month, when [illegible] fore its close [illegible] business. Already [illegible] signed for the [illegible] sale of valuable downtown [illegible] involving nearly [illegible] dollars' worth of papers for which should be passed before the first of next month. Other deals of an important character are pending and should be brought to a close within a few [illegible].

The sale of suburban property is about normal. Suburban brokers look forward to an active demand for suburban property in the spring and are already laying their plans accordingly.

In the Back Bay [illegible] several sales of an interesting character. Perhaps the most important was the purchase of the five-story brick apartment house at No. 177 Peterboro street by Robert Alpert. The grantor was Arthur N. Lewis. The structure has a valuation of $66,000, of which $7,500 is on the land, which has an area of [illegible] square feet.

Another [illegible] Bank Bay sale was that of [illegible] apartment house at No. 111 [illegible] transferred [illegible] Rose Brown to Natalie R. Lefevre. [illegible] valued at $41,000. The land [illegible] assessed for $11,200.

IMPORTANT REAL ESTATE DECISION IN NEW YORK

Court Decides Realty Concern Must Come Within Jurisdiction of Banking Dept.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Legitimate real estate men of this city, engaged in a campaign under the leadership of the New York American to purify the realty business of the city, are jubilant over the decision handed down by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the case of Arthur Edward Jacobs, plaintiff, respondent, against Monaton Realty Investing Corporation, defendant, appellant. In this decision a majority held:

"The Legislature, having with great care in the interest of the public, for the purpose of protecting small investors, who may be attracted by the promise of future results based upon small installment payments, precisely prescribed what kind of corporations may do such business and attempted to safeguard such business with the particularity illustrated by the statutes referred to, requiring preliminary certificates and continued inspection and supervision by State officers, would seem to have denied to mere business corporations to engage in similar enterprises, even if the ingenuity of the promoters thereof succeeded in combining in one some of the incidents of many. To permit such a palpable evasion would be to declare the law to be a dead letter."

EFFECT OF DECISION.

This decision virtually brings companies like the Monaton Realty Investing Corporation within the jurisdiction of the Banking Department so that they will be obliged to conduct their businesses subject to the supervision of this department.

This is what legitimate real estate men have been fighting to secure in order to minimize the extent of realty frauds which have deluged the market during the past few years.

The New York American has agitated reform in this particular "branch" of the real estate business, showing in all such cases as brazenly in defiance of moral obligations as [illegible] of the law. It is well to sound again a note of [illegible] not given [illegible] Corporations [illegible] a deal [illegible] to the [illegible] first [illegible] lower [illegible] to the [illegible] types of the sales agent, show him any [illegible] anything without the lawyer's consent. Above all, before making purchases [illegible] insist upon [illegible] a clear certificate of title. At least [illegible] protect [illegible] the consequences [illegible].

PERSONAL RELICS, PERHAPS, OF ST. PETER AND ST. PAUL

May Be Found in the Unexplored Vaults of St. Clement's Basilica, the Oldest Church

The Porch of the Upper Basilica, Clement, Rome.

Curious Fresco of the Blind Men Carrying Pillars for Building the Basilica

THROUGH the initiative of Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, the most ancient church in Rome is being restored so that its wonders may be seen by worshippers, archæologists and visitors.

The church is the Basilica of San Clemente, which was originally built over the paternal house of Pope Clement I. He was the first Pope and Bishop of Rome after St. Peter concerning whom anything definite is known. Between him and St. Peter there were two Popes, named Linus and Cletus, whose history is very shadowy. Saint Clement held the office from about 90 to 100 A. D.

He is the Clement mentioned by St. Paul in his epistle to the Philippians (iv., 3) as a fellow laborer. In his house in Rome he sheltered and entertained St. Peter and St. Paul.

Beneath the ancient basilica have been found the remains of at least four distinct buildings, going back from the first years of the Christian church to the half legendary times of the Roman Kings. All this wealth of material, of great religious and archæological interest, was in danger of destruction by back water of the Tiber, which had collected around the foundations.

Cardinal O'Connell gathered a fund of $25,000 from Bostonians of artistic sympathies, and with this an underground drain and system of locks will be constructed that will carry the water back to the Tiber.

The ancient church has been in the possession of the Irish Dominicans for over 400 years. In 1857 Father Mullooly, the prior of the chapter, began to dig beneath the surface of the present church and discover the remarkable ruins hidden beneath.

Under the floor of the present basilica, which was built in the tenth century, is a complete earlier basilica, which is believed to have been built in the fourth century, in the time of the Emperor Constantine. A staircase of broad steps now leads down to the earlier church.

The lower church contains many interesting artistic works. The walls of the porch are decorated with very ancient frescoes. There is a curious statuette of St. Peter as the Good Shepherd, which may date from the lifetime of the apostle.

The nave of the lower church is separated from the aisles by huge marble and granite columns, which from their lack of uniformity are supposed to have been taken from various forgotten pagan temples. Many of the frescos in the church are partially obliterated or covered up, and their restoration would be a most interesting work.

One of the best preserved is a representation of St. Clement celebrating mass, and another shows certain men who, according to legend, were stricken blind for attacking St. Clement, carrying pillars to build the church.

A doorway from the lower church leads to a heathen temple devoted to the worship of the Persian god Mithras. All the paraphernalia associated with this strange cult was found here. The worship of Mithras was introduced into Rome between the second and third centuries, when the Romans were ready to take up any strange religion. It is supposed that this temple was introduced into the basilica in order to pollute the Christian sanctuary at the time of the last persecution.

Beneath the lower church has been found a complete and very fine ancient Roman dwelling house. This was probably the house of Saint Clement's ancestors. It is without a rival in religious interest, for it was here that Clement entertained St. Peter and St. Paul, and it is the only existing building associated with those apostles. The old house shows traces of the periods of the empire, the republic and the kings.

In the unexplored chambers and corners of this house are perhaps objects that were used by the two great apostles.

The present basilica stands upon the surface of the ground and is a very plain building and for that reason often escapes notice by the Within it is extremely interesting.

The upper church contains a great wealth of statuary, monuments, mosaics and frescos. The most beautiful artistic feature is the frescos by Masaccio, the painter.

The ancient church, with its wonderful church, made an effort the water from the streets had pumped for eight days returned to its lower the circumstances it was to attempt an investigation of St. Clement's much less of the remains beneath it. A great to the old church will be averted by American

What We Think of the "Old Folks"

Anna Held's Daughter and Oscar Hammerstein's Granddaughter Make Very Frank Criticisms of Mother Anna and Grandpa Oscar and Their Old Fashioned Ways

Liane Carrera, Anna Held's Daughter.

Oscar Hammerstein.

TIMES change, and the older generations do not change with them as much as they think. Many a parent who thinks herself up-to-the-minute only conveys the impression of a ten-year-old bonnet or a 1914 model dress to her daughter. No doubt our children hold opinions about us which would humiliate us profoundly were they not too polite to express them.

On this page Liane Carrera, the daughter of Anna Held, and Elaine Hammerstein, the great Oscar's granddaughter, depart from the traditional reticence upon so painful a subject and tell just what they think of mama and grandpa.

THE STORY OF MY LIFE—

By Evelyn Thaw

Chapter XVI.---Her Baby Repudiated by Her Husband and His Family, Evelyn Thaw Seeks a Livelihood on the Stage

Harry Was Very Fond of Making Pencil Sketches of Evelyn as a Child in Short Skirts—This Is the Last Sketch He Made of Her.

"[illegible] Broadway" [illegible] which catered [illegible] Broadway and [illegible] stated in the final clause—the most important truth [illegible]

Broadway was situated. Broadway, the centre of the New York [illegible] was in convulsions of various kinds. To do [illegible]

But it was on the puzzling question that the fact most [illegible] less stable and [illegible] knowing up and down [illegible] possible later [illegible] even was her self [illegible]

It was [illegible] More than [illegible] Perhaps [illegible] "amazed" [illegible]

Upper Broadway knows little about babies, and cares [illegible] It knows all about the bright lights and the theatres and restaurants and [illegible] knows a lot about them. It had known Harry Thaw and had known me. And it knew every detail of [illegible]

Therefore, it was chaos—a state of [illegible] Broadway, in this connection, to [illegible] the progress of the second trial to the effect that I had [illegible] time previous [illegible]

It was [illegible] obvious con[illegible] upon Mr. Delmas [illegible] had [illegible] settled it that I was denied forever the privileges of motherhood.

Harry Thaw had never been divorced about this. And there were two eminent surgeons, whose names were especially familiar to patients in the most celebrated private surgical hospital in America, who knew that nothing of the sort had happened.

The facts are [illegible]

The first of the [illegible] referred to by Mr. Delmas was performed [illegible] inary operation for removal of the appe[illegible] second operation, performed at [illegible] hospital by [illegible] two years later, [illegible] had formed as the wound healed—as not infrequently happens in such cases. The second operation corrected this abnormality, and left me in perfect health, which I have enjoyed almost uninterruptedly ever since.

It is strange how a favorite obsession clings in certain minds. Knowing Broadway, I had known all along that Broadway would be "amazed" when the news about my baby came out. I also realized that, in many instances, this amazement would not carry conviction with it.

Even now, when Russell Thaw has passed his third birthday, and people who have the opportunity of seeing him constantly remark upon striking points of resemblance to both his father and his mother, I frequently hear of perfect strangers to me saying to each other:

"Would you believe that any woman in her position could go on sticking to such a preposterous story?"

"Certainly not. Why it was in all the papers what Delmas said."

Why Harry Was so Astonished.

Presently I learned that Harry Thaw was "amazed" but for quite a different reason.

His amazement was simply due to the fact that I had kept my secret so well.

You will remember that, upon the occasion of that last, stormy interview between us in Matteawan, in the presence of Dr. Sillo, what was to happen in a few months should then and there have revealed some indications—at least to the family physician, if not to the husband.

Well, I heard that Harry Thaw, on receiving that startling news, summoned Dr. Sillo to [illegible] him:

"You had been seeing h[illegible] hadn't you?"

Dr. Sillo had to confess that [illegible] had never missed calling promptly on him th[illegible] the seventy-dollar check was due.

"And you [illegible] and the [illegible] go fro[illegible] New York with h[illegible] at the time [illegible] her last [illegible]"

That was [illegible]

"Well, why didn't you tell me about this?" demanded Harry. "You were the family physician, weren't you—and supposed to know about such matters?"

Thereupon—so I learned—Dr. Sillo declared that he told Harry nothing simply because there was nothing to tell. Of course, he would have known. It was all a newspaper yarn. Nothing in it. Evelyn hadn't had any baby of her own.

"Why, then," said Harry, "[illegible] that [illegible] per for fifty thousand dollars, and [illegible] the money."

"I suppose the whole Thaw family [illegible] the start [illegible] the newspaper [illegible] the dozen, and I [illegible] that the baby was [illegible] said—well, I [illegible]

[illegible] deep[illegible]

Wasn't it perfectly apparent that Evelyn Thaw was trying to live a few chapters out of [illegible] popular novels of fifty years ago—trying to foist upon the [illegible] of the [illegible]

No More Money for Me from the Thaws.

[illegible] apparently, to convince her how useless it was for me [illegible] such "tricks" upon the Thaws—the eminent Thaws [illegible]

[illegible] The next time I called on Dr. Sillo for [illegible]

[illegible] I say both proved more than a nine days' wonder. I [illegible] newspaper comment with especial [illegible] [illegible] ing it, please remember that it was not I [illegible] any false [illegible] [illegible] but made any "announcement" about the [illegible]

...g—opposition or drink—occurred to ruffle him
...Still, I was not at all eager to testify in support of his release at Matteawan. I desire you to believe that I was devoid of any vindictive feeling in the matter.
When Mr. Jerome sent for me—informally, without a subpoena—I responded in person at his office. He made no effort to coerce me—quite the contrary.
"I would like to know how you feel about this," he said, in substance. "I believe that by this time you must be convinced in your own mind that Harry Thaw is insane. And, of course, I know that the treatment you have received at the hands of Harry and his people must have left you without any personal regard for their feelings or wishes. Yet I shall not ask you to testify against your will."
Mr. Jerome made no attempt to bring any pressure to bear upon me by means, for instance, of the affidavit I made at the time I began—by the written desire of Mrs. William Thaw—my marriage annulment suit. You will recall that the particular ground of complaint to that affidavit was that Harry Thaw was insane at the time of our marriage, and that he was therefore incompetent to make a marriage contract.
I was simply to do as I saw fit about testifying. So, rather unwillingly, I confess, I became a witness for the defense—that is, for the State, whose object was to sustain the Matteawan verdict.
Having already made sufficient reference to the testimony and to the outcome of the Judge Keogh hearing, there is only one reason why I revert to that episode.

'Am Forced Upon the Stage.

It is because at that time there were so many references to strong influences in certain quarters exerted to keep Harry in Matteawan"—those absurd statements about a "hand of rich criminals behind the attiture of Mr. Jerome and Dr. Flint," and so on.
Thaw made great capital of that. It contributed to his cause the color and dash that he loved. It was the invention of something to make people sympathize with him.

The only influence operating against the desires of Harry Thaw and him family that I have ever been able to discern is the "influence" of the State of New York—and I ought to know.
My old creditors were by this time thoroughly alive to the fact that they could base no further hopes on Thaw generosity. They persisted in annoying me to an extent that was almost unbearable. In vain I sent word to them that I would pay if only they would give me a little time.
I felt certain of this, for my recent visit to Europe had brought me definite offers to appear at the London Hippodrome at a really fine salary. Yet when, a year later, I returned to New York at the head of my own company to fulfil an engagement at Hammerstein's, those creditors pounced upon me like a pack of wolves and forced me into bankruptcy.
That was the penalty I paid for having enjoyed unlimited credit as the wife of Harry Thaw.
It was while I was on the ship sailing for Europe, that the tide of events at last turned in my favor.
My position was a very serious one—more serious than at any other period of my life. I was thrown absolutely upon my own resources. And what were they? Apparently nil.

One morning I noticed seated opposite me at breakfast a very young looking man. There was nothing about him to suggest that he was in any way associated with the theatrical business. Half idly I imagined him to be some young Italian nobleman returning from a visit to the United States. Later, having seen him in conversation with some I knew, I asked who he was.
"That is Albert de Courville," said my friend. "He is the manager of the London Hippodrome, and he is very keen on your appearing under his management."
It was a novel idea to me, and yet it opened a vista which I felt was peculiarly agreeable. In England, I thought, I was an unknown quantity, the echoes of the Thaw trials having died down.
Later in the day I was introduced to Mr. de Courville, and we chatted about pretty nearly everything else under the sun but any engagement for me to appear on the London stage. I soon discovered that the matter was in the hands of Mr. Marinelli, the agent.
I signed the contract to appear at the London Hippodrome with a comfortable sense that at last I was going into strenuous work, and that in a country where my name was practically unknown.
My faith in my obscurity was to be rudely shaken. The London newspapers took up the matter, accusing the Hippodrome management of "notoriety-seeking." The whole "Thaw Case" was recalled. I could not deny that the attitude of one paper was perfectly logical when it printed this inquiry:
"If Mrs. Thaw is to appear on the stage for no other reason than because she is the wife of a man who is, at the present moment, a convicted murderer, where will this form of entertainment end?"

Harry Escaped to Gain Control of Me Again.

But the Hippodrome management and the London editors did not pursue the argument to the extent of getting me excluded from the Hippodrome stage, or from the critical columns of the leading newspapers.
I was cordially accepted by London theatregoers. I believe the fact was also echoed to the American papers that the English press criticisms of my work were distinctly favorable.
I found the situation practically the same when I returned to New York for my engagement at Hammerstein's. The audiences accepted me—sometimes fully as warmly as I deserved; and none of the press criticisms was actually unkind or prejudiced.
Of course, the great, the sensational, event while I was playing in New York was the escape of Harry Thaw from Matteawan.
I shall not attempt to describe my emotions on hearing that alarming news. I seemed to see him before me—and in his "insanest aspect."
I realized very well why he had at last broken out of his prison. It was because I had succeeded at something without his advice and aid—in spite of him.
I knew that he had been unable to endure the thought of that. While I was helpless, "down and out," he had held his face against all suggestions of escape. Now it was different. I was successful. I could get along without him—it must be stopped! I was his wife. He would use his authority!
People wondered why his escape had not been arranged so as to put him aboard some vessel sailing for Europe where he would be comparatively safe from arrest and extradition.
What good would that have been—his liberty being only of secondary importance? If he were in Europe and I in America, how could he exercise any influence or authority over me?
His only chance to carry out his designs upon me was to be somewhere within striking distance and wait his opportunity.
You may believe that his capture was a relief to me. It enabled me to start on my tour of the large cities of the United States with a confidence and a feeling of security that I would not otherwise have had.
Everywhere, thus far, my work have been rewarded with evidences of enjoyment and respect—usually with profit to my managers, Comstock and Gest, in Chicago, for example, the great Auditorium theatre—where crowds of ... and women ... and where the National Republican Convention ... held—was crowded ... for ... weeks.

THIS week I am minded to send you pictures of some of the costumes that I wear myself for the street. For [illegible] I favor [illegible] materials or [illegible] made on the [illegible] of my [illegible] Curate [illegible] simple [illegible] of fairs of [illegible] or broadcloth, but excessively well made.

I am a great deal of a stickler on the subject of workmanship. In my critics [illegible] workmanship means more than one realization. This is true in regard to houses, rooms and motor cars as well as clothes and dresses. One can cover [illegible] made [illegible] with [illegible] decorations and wood carving or machine made—but these ornamentations fool not one person who knows the good from the bad.

Just so, one may cover [illegible] clothing of a garment or [illegible] with lashings of decoration, but the [illegible] woman is not fooled.

Perhaps I make too much of a matter of line, perhaps I put too much stress on workmanship, but I do not believe so. There is much art in good craftsmanship. To me these three costumes which I am describing this week are perfect specimens of craftsmanship. In the brown walking costume I have allowed [illegible]

Bulgaria's Pitiful Appeal to the World

A Heroic Nation That Has Stood Through the Centuries, Protecting Civilization and Holding Barbarism in Check, Now Asks Recognition of Those So Long Protected.

The Cry of a Starving, Tortured Nation Should Be Heard and Heeded. Christianity Would Be a Poor Thing if It Did Not Respond to Those That Have Been for Ages Christianity's Bulwark.

To Give to Bulgaria, Bleeding and in Distress, Is the Duty of Every Civilized State That Exists, BECAUSE BULGARIA Has Fought for Ages to Keep the Turks Within Bounds. With More Than Forty Thousand Killed and Hundred Thousand Wounded, Bulgaria Has a RIGHT to Demand Aid of Those She Has so Long Defended---ALL THE CIVILIZED NATIONS.

THE development of civilization, the peaceful growth of science and all branches of knowledge, have depended, for Europe and America, upon the battle AGAINST ASIATIC INVASION.

Western Europe grew in power because a few courageous men of Eastern Europe were able through centuries of battling to hold the Turks in check and keep them in their place, after Mohammed and his hordes were driven back from their whirlwind of conquest ages ago.

Desperate have been the fights and glorious the victories of the smaller nations of Eastern Europe during the hundreds of years of fighting.

Foremost among the fighters, among the little nations great in courage, has been Bulgaria, with her Southern frontier touching Turkey and Mohammedanism, her face turned in relentless battle toward barbarism, her sons and her suffering paying for the civilization of Western Europe.

Little the average man knows of that fighting Bulgarian race, stretching along the mountain chain in the northeastern part of the Balkan peninsula.

A primitive and a simple people, a race of farmers, passionately attached to the soil, a small nation, but one of great courage and great service to the entire world of progress.

To-day from that people, butchered in its defense of civilization and Christianity, there comes a pitiful cry for help that from the top of Mount Musalla should be heard around the world.

Bulgaria has fought, bled and fought again. To-day she can fight no more, until she shall have had time to raise another generation of fighting men. Tens of thousands of widows with their children weep in despair; the women, the children and the old men are overwhelmed with disaster and actual starvation.

This newspaper has published the pitiful appeal for help, the cry of starving millions.

That appeal should be heard and the response should be generous from every corner of the civilized world, from every man who owes to civilization his happiness and security.

Bulgaria to-day is like a trembling, sick man, arising from a fearful operation, bled almost to death.

The late war has been one of disaster and horror.

But remember that it has once more proved and emphasized the fact that Europe is to remain EUROPEAN.

To-day, as in the days of Attila, civilization depends upon successful repulse of Asiatic invasion.

The leader of the great Tartar hordes boasted that the grass should not grow where his horse's hoofs had trod.

Civilization and freedom cannot live where the curse of the Turk and Mohammedanism penetrates.

The world of civilization, happiness and prosperity owes a debt to Bulgaria, bled to exhaustion and now starving at the end of a dreadful war.

For that one small nation sent practically its entire fighting manhood into the field.

More than 44,000 were killed, more than 100,000 were wounded.

Every dollar that the nation could raise was spent—and that was the price of checking the power of Asia and bringing near the Turkish exodus across the Bosphorus.

The prostration of the Bulgarian nation is complete, and a generation must pass before the race will revive and replace with new men the tens of thousands that lie dead upon the Balkan slopes, or piled in trenches, where they met and defeated the Turks in this Twentieth Century, as they had done so often in centuries past.

Every battle of Europe against Asia, of Eastern Europe against the Turks, has been called "a battle for Christianity," or a battle of "the Cross against the Crescent."

Those that are cynical point out that Christianity within its own borders has shed more blood than all the Turks that ever lived. True, indeed, and a disgrace to that poor half savage thing that has called itself "Christianity" for nineteen hundred years.

Christians HAVE butchered each other in a way that might fill any Turk with admiration and envy.

But Christians have NOT killed freedom. Although the attempt has often been made, in the NAME of Christianity, to kill freedom and freedom of thought, the effort has failed.

Had the Turks conquered Western Europe, had any great invasion swept unchecked over the civilized Western nations, freedom and free thought must have died.

Moral and mental stagnation, brutal ignorance would have settled down again in power, and the progress that we know known would have been postponed for centuries.

You who now live as you please, and think as you please, would be forced to pray five times with your face toward the Bible, some toward the Prophet's grave at Mecca. Your books would be burned, your thoughts and beliefs supplied ready made, your face a horror. Thank the spirit of Eastern Europe, the spirit of the Balkans and others that have stood sentry duty on the outskirts of civilization, keeping from the barbaric flood and heat, and respond to Bulgaria's sad, heartbroken plea for help.

Your mind should see this world as your home and all of those that have fought for freedom as your friends and benefactors.

If a faithful friend had stood for years protecting you, you would feel for him in sorrow and starvation.

Bulgaria has been a faithful watchman nation. On her lonely mountains hundreds of thousands of men have died that we of the "civilized" world might build up civilized life in safety.

What you are, you owe to the progress of the race.

What you know, you owe to the knowledge of the race.

What you own, you owe to the collective intelligence of the race and to permanent laws that protect your ownership.

All that European and American civilization is and has it owes to fighting men that have lived by battle and danger—keeping Western Europe SAFE from barbarism, through the working out of the problem.

Prosperity OWES help to Bulgaria.

Christianity owes its existence and persistence to the fighters of Eastern Europe.

Bulgaria lies prostrate, helpless, miserable and starving. Her appeal for help will be heeded—if there is indeed Christianity any of the kindness that it professes, or in intelligent civilization any sense of duty.

I [illegible]

A Few Caricatures of the American Woman That Have Lately Appeared in That Lively Periodical, La Vie Parisience, and That Illustrate the Remarks of M. Deschamps.

"The dress of American women is often a ridiculous exaggeration of the fashions of Paris."

"The American woman drinks immoderately, and the Fifth avenue matron is often carried home at 2 in the morning"

"The American husband only exists to supply his wife with luxuries."

[illegible] circumstances, marry twenty-five or thirty years after their engagement

The American woman marries from curiosity or from a desire to have some one else support her. Her temperament is selfish, cold and calculating beneath an appearance sometimes [illegible]. The establishment of a home, love of family, unity of sentiments do not enter into her calculations. She either throws herself with her customary audacity into an adventure likely to bring her new sensations, or else she regards the match as a good business affair. If she is mistaken, there is always the divorce court.

The American woman drinks immoderately. The poorer classes ale drinks well key, in the upper champagne. If the use of wine is considered a European vice by American fanatics, parents and moralists, it is because they have no conception of using it without abusing it. With them, to drink means to become [illegible].

Among 44,000 arrests for drunkenness in New York in 1905 I find there were just 10,000 [illegible] women of every class, rich and poor, in the worst offenders.

A New York clergyman once declared that American women drank, and to prove it he invited an entertainment which twenty-four women drank thirty-six bottles of champagne and smoked seven dozen cigarettes. He considered a European [illegible] among ladies who drink, but did not like to have their pastor mention it.

A typical scene of New York life would show a lady from Fifth avenue being carried from a hotel into her car insensible at 2 o'clock in the morning after four or five hours of steady drinking.

The American woman smokes also. She is not satisfied with the cigarette, like her sister of Europe, but sometimes soothes herself with a pipe. Strange to say, the cigaret [illegible] regarded as a shameful vice in [illegible] America while the pipe, clean and quiet [illegible].

[illegible] does not [illegible] the American [illegible] do almost [illegible] ago seen his former [illegible] on the street and passes her from habit. Four thousand dollars damages!

Professors give lectures in the art of kissing, the professor of this art, lecturing in Boston, said:

"The best kissers come from Smith College although the daughters of Radcliffe prefer kissers in rapids. The kiss of the Yankee girl is like a [illegible]. The kiss of the Negress is like a [illegible]. The kiss of the Hebrew is [illegible] compared to a [illegible].

[illegible] the Middle States [illegible] America [illegible] and people [illegible].

He observed the precaution not to take them all with him. He scattered them along his path while pursuing his holy ministry. Then discovered one in Cincinnati, another in Providence, one in Texas, one in California, one in Colorado, one in Utah, and so on.

Americans marry so hastily that sometimes they do not know one another's names when the marriage ceremony is performed.

The instability of marriage in the United States is due to lack of unity in family interests.

In France marriage means the union of two sympathies, two existences. The life of a couple is one, with all its hopes, efforts and delights, its good fortune and misfortune. In the United States husband and wife pursue a separate course. It is not a union, but a partnership, in which the woman has the greater share of the profits. The table and the living room unite them sometimes, but the private life of each is separate, as before marriage.

The witty artist Johnson has shown clever[illegible] cartoon how American wives and husbands go through life. The husband, bent and [illegible], trudges up [illegible] fashion dripping from his forehead wrinkled by fatigue and labor, while on his back, comfortably seated in an armchair, the wife reads [illegible] pages she remarks, "Can't you go a little faster, dearie?"

The dress of American women often is a caricature of the fashions of Paris. If our dames are large, the American woman must have them larger. If the Parisienne has openwork in her shirtwaist, the American woman must have openings two or three times larger.

The waist line of the rich American may be [illegible] and easily, but that of the woman of the middle or poorer classes is very scanty. It can all be packed in a valise. Each of the essential articles of lingeries is represented by two, or at the most, three pieces—the chemise being entirely lacking. Americans have not the French woman's love of lingeries. They find it troublesome to carry, on account of their habit of constantly moving, and fatiguing to repair.

Young and married girls of the wealthy classes often have establishments of their own away from the family home. Miss Mary Van Alen, the grand daughter of Mrs Astor, set the fashion in this respect. The daughter of the celebrated banker, J. P. Morgan, has a bungalow on the summit of the Rocky Mountains, where she lives alone in the Summer and hunts the bear and the panther for an intellectual woman, and as that her mind cannot develop in a house full of people. She passes three-quarters of the year traveling, and when she comes back to New York she lives alone in her own home.

American women study music to an appall[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

THAT AFFAIR NEXT DOOR

An Entrancing Tale of Love and Mystery

BY ANNA KATHERINE GREEN

When I heard that a young woman had been found dead in the Van Burnam mansion, Miss Adelaide Bell with whom I had formerly been a fellow student at Madame Rosenthal's Select School for Young Ladies, and who had married Howard Van Burnam, a wealthy young man of the world, I cannot say, for I never had any reason to expect so dire a termination to their marriage relations. And I cannot believe now that he asked her, can you, Miss Butterworth?" Howard has the reputation of being a gentleman in all the broad sense of the word, but there is such a thing as being too polite, and the perpetration of that crime would be a disgrace to any man.

Have you thought of this, Miss Butterworth?"

"Yes," I nodded. I also looked over the people on all sides.

"Mr. Stone," said she, "I was dreadfully over the part I was ordered to play at the inquest. But now I know how the police would have liked me to act."

"Pshaw!" I declared.

It has made us doubly anxious to have Howard free himself. But we does not seem able to do so. If his wife had only known

Was there a mirror in the room I was watching? I half raised my hand and then I let it drop again, convinced that I had been mistaken. Miss Allnorpe at once continued

She was not a bad-hearted woman, only vain and frivolous. She had set her heart on ruling over the great Luther merchant's house, and she did not know how to bear the loss of her disappointment. I have sympathy for her myself. When I saw her

Saw her I started, upsetting a small workbasket at my side which for one I did not stop to pick up

"You have seen her?" I repeated, dropping to my own the patient to fix them in my unbounded astonishment on Miss Allnorpe's face.

Yes, more than once. She was here during I would not repeat this a nurse's governess or a family where I once visited but was before her marriage, before she had met either Howard or Franklin Van Burnam.

I was so overwhelmed, that for once I found difficulty in speaking. I glanced from her to the white form on the shrouded bed, and back again in ever-growing astonishment and dismay.

"You have seen her!" I at last reiterated in what I meant to be a whisper, but which fell little short of being a cry, and you took in this affair?"

He suppose at this burst was almost equal to mine.

Yes, sir, no! What have they in common

I sank back, my house of cards was trembling to its foundations.

"You look shocked," he went on, "as if you thought I had been indiscreet. Was it? I thought I was doing my duty in telling you the truth. Miss Allnorpe is a woman of the world, and I never believed that she would have any reason to conceal the fact that she had been a visitor in the house of her former friend. Besides, I was under the impression that you knew it already."

CHAPTER XXV.

HAD Mr. Gryce been present, I would have felt myself under no obligation to keep my discovery to myself. But as he was not, I thought it my duty to tell Mr. Van Burnam what I had learned. He was very much moved.

"Louise Van Burnam had spoken of a watch," he said. "Was it found on the person of the murdered woman?"

Miss Allnorpe, whom I had forgotten, was still present. While she was I could not speak. I rose and begged her to withdraw. She did so, but with evident reluctance. I was glad of it

The Blindness of Virtue ~ By Cosmo Hamilton

Author of "Adam's Clay"

HARRY PEMBERTON is what might be called a practical parson. With the help of his pretty wife he conducts the affairs of a humble parish in East Brenton in a way that draws the admiration and support of everybody. He is athletic and popular with the young, sympathetic and in favor with the old, generous and loved by the poor.

If She Had Not Kissed Him That Once, Archie Would Never Have Guessed Her Glowing Secret

They have a daughter, Effie, beautiful, charming and modest, whom they rear with the utmost care, her only companions being her father, mother and Cookie, the maid. The girl is carefully guarded against all untoward influences and reaches the age of nineteen as unsophisticated as an infant.

Just as she is wondering what life really means, and is reaching out to grasp its secrets, there comes a young man, Archie Graham, to be tutored by her father. He has been a bit wild at college, been dismissed, and then sent by his father to be guided by the parson. Archie is an honorable fellow and promptly makes himself a favorite in the household.

As the weeks go by Effie falls deeply in love with the boy, but doesn't realize it until he goes to London for a day and evening's pleasure with an old boy chum. He intends to return on the midnight train, but does not get back until after the breakfast.

Meanwhile, Harry has been called to see Mary Anne Lemmins, the nineteen-year-old daughter of a poor parishioner. The girl had left home with a man she loved and trusted, had been betrayed by him and then deserted, and had come home, weary, wan and sick.

While talking with the girl Harry comes suddenly to realize that it was ignorance of delicate matters, on which she should have been enlightened by her mother, that was directly responsible for her pitiful plight. He thereupon determines that he will fight this ignorance, which he knows prevails generally.

Marry Anne's baby dies at birth. After the funeral, Harry assembles all the mothers in the parish and tells them what their duty is toward their daughters. On their return to the vicarage Harry asks his wife if she has told Effie the things she should know. Mrs. Pemberton confesses that she has never talked with Effie about those things, not thinking it necessary. Harry insists that she tell her and she agrees to do so.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Helen Decays Carrying Out Her Duty.

THE year grew old.

Harvest gathered in, root picked, roses fallen, the leaves still clinging turned to red, turned to yellow, and waited for the winds and rain. Swallows, swifts, and martins left their nests and gathered together upon the telegraph wires, ready but unwilling to sail. Owls hooted in the pollards as days closed in, and wasps found warm corners in which to sleep and die.

No longer was the Vicarage garden aflame with colour. Scudding clouds by day and cold sparkling skies by night looked down upon almost empty beds. Here and there an autumn flower glimmered red and yellow.

But in the house fires burned and lamps gleamed early, and the work of the day was as early and as late as ever. Summer and autumn, spring and winter, brought with them new work, new duties, for Harry and his wife.

Harry did not need Mary Anne Lemmins in his house to remind him of one of his new duties. Already he had held long talks with East Brenton mothers on the question of dealing fairly and honorably and fearlessly by their daughters. If he had not been Harry Pemberton, the man who had earned the confidence and affection of them all, they would have regarded the opening up of such a matter with them as impertinent interference. Their attitude was the general attitude. That they should be asked to discuss calmly with their young daughters anything which has to do, however remotely, with so delicate a question shocked and surprised them. They had not been told by their mothers. Why should they tell their daughters he told? They could not "bring themselves" to do it. They listened wide-eyed to Harry's sympathetic comments, but [illegible] nothing more than think it over. When [illegible] conclusion that the whole thing was a cranky idea of the Vicar's. "Oh! he's a clergyman," they said to themselves, "and he must do something." And when [illegible] but too self indulgent to undertake a task which seemed to them full of difficulty, discussed the matter with their husbands, they all met with more or less the same reply. "[illegible] ought to [illegible] bold hussy. [illegible] ideas? Let me see you at it!"

And so, although they all knew that the Vicar meant well, they decided to leave well alone, not to break down the conspiracy of silence which they had always been taught was the right thing, and not to interfere with the laws of nature. If their daughters were, unfortunately, of the kind to go wrong, nothing that they could say would prevent it. "What was good enough for my mother and grandmother must be good enough for me. I don't hold," they argued, "with these new fangled ideas."

Harry persisted. He tried to make these mothers understand that knowledge protected innocence while ignorance made it an accident. Why should their children be taught anything? Why teach at all? If it was right to teach them one thing, it was right to teach them everything. He tried to win the few educated women in the place over to his side. But these people treated him to stiffer backs and more outraged expressions than he met among the [illegible] classes. They simply wondered that a clergyman of the Church of England could permit himself to entertain ideas so diametrically opposed to all the teachings of the Church. They dubbed him revolutionary, socialistic, almost French. "I could not be so immodest," they said, with tilted chin, "as to broach such a subject to my pure-minded young daughters. Therefore you must not ask me to do so to the daughters of the poor."

Harry found that, like all enthusiastic crusaders, he had gone to work too rapidly. He had put his finger on what he took to be, and knew positively to be, as all thinkers for years have taken and known positively to be, a dangerous weakness in the upbringing of the young. He wanted to make an alteration at once. He wanted to apply a remedy before people were aware of a disease. His distress at the almost callous attitude on the part of all the women to whom he spoke was acute. He made a fresh start. If he could not persuade the mothers to protect their daughters, he would not rest until he had imbued the young men with an ambition to protect them. "Treat every girl," he said to them, "as you would have your sister treated. Let no young woman be the worse for knowing you."

It was an uphill struggle. Mothers and fathers, even the so-called educated mothers and fathers, considered his doctrine to be dangerous and abominable, and the young men grinned and winked behind his back. "Fine cricketer, the parson," they said. "Suppose he thinks it his job to talk rot."

But Harry had barred his arms to fight ignorance and false modesty, and nothing should stop him. He would, however, fight with unseen weapons. He gave up discussing the subject and held classes for young girls in the new room of the club. He called them cooking and household classes, but they were conducted [illegible] by an enlightened and sympathetic woman from London, who led [illegible] gently into the knowledge of the essential things which their loving and assiduous parents regarded as disgusting and immodest.

So far as Effie was concerned, Harry [illegible] was not ignorant, at any rate. Innocent and modest, yes, but not ignorant. Helen had seen to that.

But Helen had not seen to that.

Helen was the daughter of an English [illegible] a number of Egyptian middle [illegible]. She had been brought up in [illegible] respectable [illegible] by an elderly aunt, who was the widow of an Oxford don. It is true that she had spent the greater part of her life among the poor, rubbing shoulders with ignorance, immorality, crime, poverty, starvation, disease, and dirt. It is true that her mind was broad, her sympathies wide, her heart big, her knowledge of the great raw side of life immense. But prejudice and convention remained.

Her love for Harry almost amounted to adoration. She lived for him and for his work. She would willingly have died for him. He was her hero. All that was romantic in her nature was stirred by his great, strong, virile personality, his renunciation of all ambition for personal aggrandisement to devote himself body and soul to parish work—he, Harry Pemberton, who could so easily have mounted to the top of any of the trees he had chosen to climb.

Not to carry out his wishes, not to obey a request that was made under great emotion, and after deep thought, which concerned the happiness of their daughter, was to her almost a crime. In every [illegible] however big or little, he had been obeyed or obliged. And Helen, the prim Helen, the child of a man who hardly ever talked, and never in his life discussed or made confidences, was physically unable to speak, as Harry had begged her to do, and as she had agreed to do, to Effie.

Many times she had braced herself up to do so, but always, at the last moment, heredity and prejudice had made it impossible.

"To-morrow," she said—"to-morrow. Effie is very young. She runs no risks under this roof. Besides, Effie is—Effie."

All the same, Helen was not happy. Always in her mind rankled the thought that she was being disloyal to Harry. And yet, fighting this, was the deep-rooted conventional prejudice against going into the details of the relations of the sexes with her daughter who was unmarried.

In the Vicarage Helen represented the mothers of her country—the mothers who are not fit to be mothers.

And what of Effie?

She loved Archie Graham. She knew it, she gloried in it. However dull the day's round, however unexciting and monotonous the life she led, however sunless the sky, her love filled and illumined her life. It was her first love. It might or might not be her only love. Not yet twenty, there was lots of time to grow out of love and love again. But here was the heart of a young thing—one of the hearts that open with difficulty, take in bigly, and retain always. As yet, being only twenty, she was content to love. She did not know the need of having love returned. As yet it was joy enough to see and hear and step out by the side of the one whom she had taken into her heart. As yet, she did not desire, even vaguely and mysteriously, any more than this. She did not know that there could be anything more to desire. There was nothing of the clinging, tearful, namby pamby about her. She uttered no words of endearment. Her happiness came in being near Archie, in constant, fresh, joyous companionship—golfing, playing tennis and walking with him.

If she had not kissed him that once Archie Graham would never have guessed her glowing secret. Her wish to be constantly in his company was totally unaffected. Because he loved her, however, and all his senses were alive, he did guess it, and the knowledge acted upon him as a spur. He knew well enough that his vanity was fed by her love. But Harry had awakened all that was best in him—a sense of loyalty, a sense of responsibility, the knowledge that he must work before he could love, an overwhelming desire to play the man. He and she had all their lives before them, thank God! and when the time came he would claim her. Not until then. For all these reasons, then, he loved and forced himself to forget that he loved. He was like a man who finds gold, marks the place, and continues on his journey.

So far, so good.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Archie Hears Bad News.

ONE evening in mid-October, after Harry and Helen, having dined, had gone off to the club, and in the twenty minutes during which Archie pretended himself to be free before sitting down to his books for the evening, alone in the den, Bill came back from the gate, cold and rather bored. Best of All was so keen on that blessed club—and found Archie, mashie in hand standing on the mat in the hall.

Effie, with a lamp at her elbow, was kneeling on the floor, with a new book on golf, full of photographs of a champion in all the intricate attitudes of the game. It was Archie's, and had just come down from London by post.

"What!" cried Bill, "not content with playin' that old gentleman's game all the afternoon, you . . . Great Cæsar's ghost!"

He threw up his eyes and marched on to the dining-room, sat down and blinked at the fire.

"'The short approach,'" read Effie. "Now look here, Archie, do you mean to tell me that he is doing anything more than use his wrists for that?"

Archie knelt down too. Their heads nearly touched. One jerk of Archie's elbow and over went the lamp.

"Yes. I say that he's putting a certain amount of right forearm into that stroke. Not much, but a certain amount."

"Oh, bunkum!" said Effie.

"Quite Elizabethan," said Archie, with a bow.

"Oh! well, I mean nonsense."

"Mid-Victorian!" said Archie.

"Well then, rot!" she laughed.

"Anno Domini, 1908."

"It's all very fine," said Effie, "but when one's having a very serious argument about a mashie shot one can't talk the language of—of——"

"Of a Slade Professor—possibly not. The Royal and Ancient was invented and played by several hefty old Scots full of stone and unblended whiskey, and none of them [illegible]. Nevertheless——"

"Oh! do be quiet, and look at this photograph. You must own, unless you're absolutely blind, that the mashie is held lightly, and that nothing but wrist is being used."

"The photograph doesn't show how far off the pin is."

"Why should it? It says 'the short approach.'"

"Yes, but every golfer has his own ideas of how many yards a short approach is. If he plays and lies dead at thirty yards, it becomes a good fifty over the fire. But if he plays and punches, and the ball bounces off the green into the rough, it's a deceptive twenty yards—the lie was rotten and a dog barked."

Effie smothered a smile. "I don't believe," she said gravely, "that you quite appreciate the solemnity of the game. You ought to take up marbles."

Mary Anne left the dining-room with the tray.

"Mind the lamp, please, sir," she said.

"Oh, right oh!" sang out the boy. "Ah now, marbles. That's an idea. I'll train."

Effie rose and closed the book, put it on the hall table, and leaned against the stairwood well.

"The glass is rising," she said coldly.

Archie handed her the mashie. "Show me the stroke," he said.

Effie smiled and took the club. "There's the pin," she said, pointing to a riding-whip that hung from a peg at the end of the hall.

"I see it. Allow for a cross wind—stiffish."

The girl addressed an imaginary ball on the mat, played, and smashed the lamp globe into smithereens.

"Dead!" said Archie.

His Eyebrows Met, and He Gave a Gasp. "Anything Wrong?" Asked Effie Quickly.

"Oh, my!" cried Mary Anne, running forward.

"Ah!" jeered Bill—"ah!"

Effie burst into a peal of laughter. "That's threepence halfpenny of my allowance."

Archie picked up the lamp. "I'll toss you whether I pay for it or you do."

"Oh! no, thank you. I smashed it."

"Yes, but I knew you would."

There was a double knock on the door. They all turned.

Bill, who knew that the postman had been, came out and growled.

With his nose flattened against the glass in the hall door stood a small telegraph boy.

Mary Anne opened the door. "Graham," she said.

"Me!" said Archie. "Old Win, I suppose. Proposes to lunch and play a round, or wants me to run up and do another show. Can't possibly. Far too——"

He opened the telegram. His eyebrows met, and he gave a gasp.

"Anything wrong?" asked Effie quickly.

"Father's had an accident. I'm to go up at once."

"Oh!" breathed the girl.

"Oh my!" said Mary Anne.

Archie stood still for a moment, gazing at the thin piece of paper. Then he looked at the clock.

"Seven fifty-seven. I can do it on my bike."

He picked up his hat from the bench, caught Effie's hand, drew her to him, pushed her away, opened the door, and disappeared at a run.

"Archie!" cried Effie.

"Yes!" from the darkness.

"Your coat."

"Will you get it while I get my bike!"

Effie twisted round, rushed into the back hall, caught up an overcoat, and returned to the steps.

A lantern shone out of the night and quick steps crunched the gravel. Archie ran up the steps.

"Thanks awfully." The boy got into the coat. "Good-bye!" he said. He ran down the steps.

"Archie, when will you be back?"

There was no answer.

"Archie! . . ."

The gate clicked.

CHAPTER XXX.

The Father Smiles Upon the Boy.

ARCHIE bent over the handle-bars and pedalled with all his strength. Of people and dogs the roads were luckily empty, but of loose stones, broken bottles and odd bricks they were, as usual, full. No one swept the roads, and no one lit the lamps, and no one knew exactly what became of road and light taxes in East Brenton.

The station lights soon flickered through the leafless branches. Archie rode on to the path through the subway and jumped off at the steps. Up these he carried the bicycle, propped it up against the wall of the parcels office, took a single ticket to London, heard the train enter the station, and ran full tilt up the steps on to the platform. He flung himself, panting, into an empty carriage.

"Near thing, sir," said the genial station-master with a shake of the head.

Archie made no answer. The train glided out. It was a slow train, stopping not only where it ought to stop, but where it ought not as well. But if it had been a record-breaking train it could not have gone fast enough for Archie.

He had left the telegram at the Vicarage, but its message seemed to be written on the cushions of the carriage, on its walls, ceiling and floor. "His Lordship has met with an accident. Please come at once.—GEIKIE."

All that had been painful and full of irritation in his relations with this fine old man was forgotten. Their mutual misunderstandings, their silences, their recriminations, hitherto frightfully vivid whenever the thought of his father entered his head, took wings. Under the fright and anxiety and horror into which the vague telegram had flung him, Archie could only remember that he loved and admired the gaunt old man who sat alone so often in the cold, silent house, in which the mellow voice of a woman was never heard.

He only knew that one of the deeply cherished ambitions of his life had been to stand well, at last, in his father's sight, to be able to win from him, at last, a look of confidence and unsuspicious affection, a smile of approval. He knew that he had done very little to merit his suspicion and disapproval. He knew that he had tried very hard to weed out the tricks, the poses, the shiftiness, which had grown upon him like fungi. He had looked forward, with almost tremulous eagerness, to the time when, under Harry Pemberton's sunny influence, he could at last stand up before his father cleared and confident.

An accident—what did it mean? Had he worked for nothing, had he taken himself by the scruff of the neck for nothing? Was he going up to find that his efforts were too late?

Paddington, thank heaven!

And then a cab and the cold air and the blinding lights and the whirl of traffic and quick movement. "Get on!" he kept shouting. "Quicker!—quicker!"

He stood on the steps of the house he called home for the first time for many years, afraid to ring. A great trembling seized him, and his mouth became dry.

The door opened. A tall, thin, angular, big-boned man passed the servant. A brougham moved up a dozen yards nearer the house.

"Back in two hours," he said, and disappeared.

The man-servant saw Archie, and held the door open. The boy marched in and gave up his hat.

"Geikie?" he asked.

"With his lordship, sir."

The boy was afraid to ask what was the matter. If the doctor was coming back in two hours, at least his father was alive. But

He went slowly and deliberately upstairs. A hospital nurse scudded down. There was a peculiarly sweet smell everywhere. A good-looking, young-looking, middle-aged man, too, smartly dressed, hurried past him. Archie knew that it was Murray Gilchrist, his father's secretary.

He met Geikie outside his father's door. He was mopping his forehead with a red silk handkerchief.

"That be you, Mr. Archie?" he said.

The boy leaned one hand against the doorpost. "You—said—an accident—in your telegram."

"Well!" replied the valet irritably, "and isn't it an accident?"

"What is it?"

"It's in all the papers. His lordship slipped in getting out of the carriage, on [illegible] the House of Lords. Leg broken, bad jar to the system, may be on his back for months. Ye can't go in there!"

The boy pushed the man aside, quietly opened the door of his father's room, tip[illegible] across [illegible] the bed.

The gaunt old man was sleeping under a draught. The fracture had been set. In the dim light Archie could hardly see his father's face. His hand was lying limp on the blanket, palm up.

Archie sat down by the bed and took his father's hand.

* * * * * * *

The doctor came, heard the nurse's report, looked with satisfaction at the still-sleeping patient, eyed the boy curiously, and went away.

At two o'clock the next morning the night-nurse touched Archie's arm.

"Won't you go to bed now?" she whispered. "I shall be here all the time."

The boy shook his head. He held his father's hand lightly.

At five o'clock the nurse came round again. "Won't you——"

Again the boy shook his head.

* * * * * * *

At ten o'clock, the straw in the road without dulling the rumble of wheels, Lord Aberlady opened his eyes. For a moment or two he looked vaguely at the ceiling, at the new nurse, at the hoop over his leg. He moved his hand. It was held tight. He moved his head round and saw Archie.

"Oh, father!"

An infinitely tender smile played round the old man's lips.

"My boy!" he said.

IN MOVING PICTURE PLAYS YOU ALWAYS GET ORIGINAL CAST, SAYS MR. NICK YOUNG

Which Is One Point Worth Considering, to Say the Least. Most Anyone Will Admit

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THERE is one point worth considering in motion picture plays—your always get the original cast. In producing "Traffic in Souls," which is at present doing sensational business at the Globe, the selection of players must have been a serious problem, as the range of characters and the work they had to perform covered a multitude of things that could not have been imposed upon ordinary workers in the drama. "Traffic in Souls" exposes the white slavery in very business-like manner and does it to the tune of ripe old-fashioned melodrama. As a matter of fact the story as presented in the six reels at the Globe could be rewritten into a melodrama for the legitimate stage that would make playgoers open their eyes. That so stirring a story should have found its way to a moving picture studio without having been halted by some regular theatrical producer carries its own blessings in the shape of a lower priced entertainment and consequent wider field of operation. "Traffic in Souls," as a dramatic offering, is good enough for any stage. Its appeal is distinctly human. So much has been written about white slavery, and so little is really known about the system that holds it together, that "Traffic in Souls" is worth your attention merely as a means of securing a proper knowledge of the dangers that are forever lurking about young and unprotected girls. Doubtless much of the interest in the pictures is due to a belief that they show forbidden scenes, which is perhaps natural—but deceiving. But you do get thrills—thrills that could not by any chance be put into a play for the legitimate stage. The story covers two hours in its telling, and during that time you are led through scenes that are astonishing in their vivid presentation. The method of financing white slavery is shown, the way young girls are trapped for the business is exposed, and the terrible conditions that exist in the houses where they are held prisoners is pictured with startling frankness. Were it not for the wholesome thrills injected into the story through the pursuit of the white slavers by the police and the pretty romance that dominates each reel, the play would be rather depressing. As it is presented, however, you see the horrors of white slavery in the shape of a well laid out story, with virtue triumphant, and vice and sin driven away in splendid confusion. "Traffic in Souls" is worth seeing.

NO, Myrtle, Frank Doane, the amorous old colonel in "Oh, Oh, Delphine," does not make himself look like Fred E. Wright of the Plymouth Theatre as a tribute to an old friend. The likeness is purely accidental. You might call it an actor's attempt to make himself handsome and taking the shortest cut to that result.

PARK SQUARE will take its real step as a theatrical centre on January 19 with the formal opening of the Cort Theatre. The attraction will be "When Dreams Come True," which has already enjoyed a full measure of success in Chicago and New York and which its author and producer, Philip Bartholomae, expects will be duplicated in this city. The new Cort Theatre will also mark another step in the plans of John Cort, who, after years of prominence as the director of a syndicate of theatres in the West, has begun an invasion of the East. His Cort Theatre in New York, which has been open for some time, is still in the [illegible] with "Peg o' My Heart," one of the few genuine hits of the season in the New York theatres. WITH four months of Broadway reputation behind her, Mary Young will return to the Castle Square stage tomorrow and resume her place at the head of John Craig's company. She will celebrate her return by playing Lily Dorrell in the Hollis. The Mind the Paint Girl," which Phillip Burke brought out at the Hollis last season. Miss Young will find a warm welcome awaiting her first appearance at the Castle Square theatre.

On [illegible] it has been [illegible] being the [illegible] of "The Sunshine Girl" and "Peggy." The Marriage Market," which tomorrow enters upon its final week in Boston, in both cases it has been amply demonstrated that musical plays of humor, catchy qualities may be safely lodged in any good theatre and that the particular prestige of any house is not a matter to be taken too seriously. Donald Brian, who dances much better than he sings, hasn't needed a voice to draw satisfactory business to "The Marriage Market." The entertainment, as a whole, was satisfactory enough to cover the [illegible] and a capable singing organization has taken good care of that part of the bill, and Mr. Brian has given his youth and his [illegible] of the entertainment. He now shows how the forts and broad boulevards have replaced hovels and mud holes, how trails in the one-time wilderness are now automobile-traveled government roads, and how the once head-hunting natives greet the traveler with a smiling "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley." Any one should be able to find complete enjoyment in Mr. Holmes and his interesting subjects.

THEY CAME TO SEE

The most satisfying, soul-stirring, emotion moving melodrama with a real, unmistakable "punch"; one that entertains as few plays can, and with it all gives one food for thought—that's why they came.

TRAFFIC IN SOULS

Means a Pictorial Exposition of JUST THAT. Its story is so cleverly contrived that in its telling the methods, the cunning, the almost unbelievable daring of an organized gang is exposed. It is not fiction entirely, this story, but FICTION CLEVERLY EXPLOITING FACTS. You follow Officer Burke along his hazardous path in search of "Little Sister" and the trail will lead you through places high and low in city life that did exist and flourish until mighty efforts were made to suppress by most powerful societies and individuals. This traffic may not be dead, it may be cunningly "sleeping." YOU and every right-minded person can help to eliminate it or forestall its awakening. TRAFFIC IN SOULS is the suggestion—see it—it can only do good.

YOUR OWN MAY BE SAFE-GUARDED from TEMPTATION

Your DUTY lies beyond them. If you are made to realize the dangers of city life for women without protectors, you are "awake" and will be one of the sentinels always on guard.

THE PIANO KING

Gives a Few Facts on Piano Buying

To the Public:—

For years I have been telling you good people of New England that it is not necessary to pay a fabulous price for a piano. Thousands have taken my advice and are now the owners of a handsome instrument. To you who are still without a piano, let me say this: You can come out here and get a beautiful piano at from ¼ to ½ less money than anywhere else. They are on our Sacrifice Selling floor to be sold—regardless of value or cost. We are free to sell at what price we like—no manufacturers' contracts to uphold prices. Practically every best-known make is there. You can pick your own kind—we don't care—we boom no make especially. A trifle down. A gift of a scarf and stool from us. Free cartage to your home—and then a little each week and the piano is yours—to have and enjoy for yourself and your children. Visit my place before or after you have been elsewhere. Hear them talk and then look at their line. I have no fear but that when you get ready to purchase that I'LL GET THE ORDER. I thrive on competition because I give the real values.

Rare Modes and Gowns Are Worn at Ladies' Night

Photograph of the brilliant gathering at the Charitable Irish Society banquet in the Copley-Plaza. At the head table are, left to right—Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Crowley, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. A. Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew A. Brickley, Mr. and Mrs. John Kiggen, Thomas Taff, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. O'Riorden, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Fitzpatrick.

THE most brilliant affair in the history of the Charitable Irish Society was its seventh annual ladies' night at the Copley-Plaza on Tuesday evening.

The committee in charge of the occasion included John A. Kiggen, chairman, who is also vice-president of the society; Michael J. Jordan, John B. Dore, Patrick H. Crowley, W. T. A. Fitzgerald, Patrick O'Loughlin, Geoffrey B. Lehy, James H. Devlin, Jr., Richard J. Lane, William J. McDaffee, Edward J. O'Connell, Dr. William J. Brickley and (ex-officio) Bartholomew A. Brickley, president; Thomas F. Taff, treasurer, and John J. Keenan, secretary.

The reception room in which the people assembled before they entered the banquet hall was decorated with greenery and overhanging orange boughs. In the banquet hall the sides of the hall were festooned with gay colored flowers, and at the circular tables were sprigs of laurel, set off with pale pink carnations.

The speakers of the evening were: John A. Kiggen, toastmaster; Bartholomew Brickley, Judge Sullivan, W. T. A. Fitzgerald, Malachi Jennings, Patrick O'Loughlin, Hon. Joseph H. O'Neil, Hon. William F. Murray, John B. Dore, Richard J. Lane, Thomas B. Fitzpatrick and Joseph F. O'Connell.

Those who contributed to the musical program were some of the best talent of Greater Boston. They included: Mrs. Ella Shea McCarthy, Mrs. Frederick Donnelly, Miss Margaret Helen Donlon, Miss Ursula O'Hare, Mrs. Albert H. Houghton, Signor Alcide de Andria, William L. Cockburn, John F. Nadlewitz, John Frederick Donnelly, Ernest W. Harrison and Walter J. Kugler.

Yearly 'Prom' of B. C. Juniors

The Junior class of Boston College will have its annual promenade at Hotel Somerset on Friday evening, February 6. The "Prom" is the largest social event of the Boston College year, and is one of the season's important Catholic events in Greater Boston.

The present Juniors have set themselves to the task of outdoing the Juniors of last year, who conducted one of the most brilliant college balls in the history of Boston.

The members of the class who are in charge of the assembly are: Maurice J. Flynn, president; Edward A. McLaughlin, vice-president; Frederick W. Wennerberg, secretary; and John J. Hopkins, treasurer. These young men will be aided by John J. Walsh, John J. Alston, Edmund J. Brandon, Edward A. McLaughlin and Francis R. Breath.

The senior class, headed by the president, Leo M. Murroy, will be present in cap and gown.

Some of the prominent society women of Boston will act as matrons. They will include Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, Mrs. James M. Morrison, Mrs. T. J. Falvey and Mrs. T. F. Boyle.

Infant Savior Guild Elects

The Guild of the Infant Savior has chosen the following officers for the ensuing year: Honorary president, Rev. James A. Supple, D. D.; president, Miss Mary A. Corcoran; vice-president, Mrs. C. G. Flynn; secretary, Mrs. William P. Derby; treasurer, Miss Rose E. Nawn; executive committee, Miss Julia C. Prendergast, Mrs. Joseph E. Flanagan, Mrs. W. V. Tait.

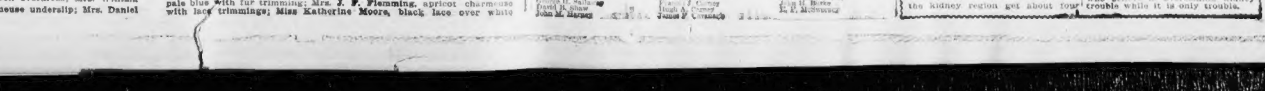
ENTERTAINS FOR MISS MARION LYNCH.

Miss Elizabeth O'Rourke of Dorchester was hostess to a few of her intimate friends, Tuesday evening, at her home. The gathering was in honor of her friend, Miss Marion Lynch, also of Dorchester. After an evening spent in the rendering of vocal and musical selections a collation was served.

Among those who helped to make the evening entertaining were, the Misses Josephine Barry, Alice Fitzgerald, Mabel Fitzgerald, Alice McGoldrick, Alice McMahon, Helen Lynch, finalie O'Rourke, Mary Quinn, Margaret Leary, Mildred Noonan, Mae Donovan and William Kerwin.

Cambridge B. C. C. Ball

The third annual assembly of the Boston College Club of Cambridge was held Friday evening in St. Mary's Hall, Cambridgeport. City Clerk Edward J. Brandon headed the general committee. The patronesses were as follows:



The committee in charge consisted of:

Party by St. Mary's Society

One of the most successful charity whist and dancing parties of the New Year was held Thursday evening at Catholic Union Hall, under the direction of Miss Catharine Gannon, and energetic workers of the St. Mary's Aid Society. Miss Gannon was assisted by Mrs. P. Quigley, who had charge of the whist tables. A score of young girls acted as aids and markers. The proceeds of the party were to help continue the good work done at the orphan asylum. The officers of the Aid society include: Mrs. Francis P. Giblin, Mrs. George Wilson and Miss Mary McTernan, secretary; all of whom were present at the affair Thursday evening. Some of the young girls who helped add in the whist included the Misses Marion G. Desmond, Esther Brooks, Alice Fee, Lillian O'Neil, Elizabeth O'Neil, Anna Bonid, Helen Sullivan, Isabelle Sullivan, Grace Hasley, Helen G. Webber, Marguerite O'Callaghan, Lucy McCarty and Mary Hennessey.

WHIST FOR LADIES' CHARITY CLUB

A whist party under the direction of the Ladies' Charity Club of East Boston will be held in Meridan Hall, Friday evening, January 23. This party was scheduled to take place last Friday, but owing to a conflict with one of the other leading East Boston affairs it has been postponed.

The whist party is expected to be one of the largest of the new season for those in charge of it have worked most enthusiastically in order to have the proceeds amount to a large sum. The whist souvenirs which will be given to the highest scorers will be very beautiful.

Those in charge of the whist party are: Mrs. J. Henry Flinn, Mrs. Frank Cunningham, Mrs. W. J. Cahill, Mrs. William Reagan, Mrs. Nellie O'Neil, Mrs. James Creedy, Mrs. James Fitzgerald, and the Misses Agnes Dennis, Margaret Chandler, Gertrude McLean, Jennie Sadler, Ella Sweeney, Annie Niland, Margaret Lally.

Cheverus Ball Feb. 23

The annual reception and ball of Bishop Cheverus Assembly, fourth degree Knights of Columbus, will this year be one of the most successful affairs that the members of the order have ever held. The entire net proceeds will be presented to Cardinal O'Connell to be distributed by him among the various diocesan charities, the needs of which the Cardinal is best able to judge.

The arrangements will include every accommodation for the large number of guests who will be entertained. The officers of the assembly will have the support of a large committee. Symphony Hall has been secured. The date has been set for Monday evening, February 23. The disposal of tickets will begin immediately.

M. Joseph O'Donnell, faithful navigator of the Bishop Cheverus Assembly, has appointed George H. McDermott of Allston as chairman of the committee. Mr. O'Donnell will have the assistance of some fifty members.

The committee has already planned to set aside both sides of the first balcony in Symphony Hall, into sections, or boxes, ten on each side. These it is expected will be disposed of by subscription to a number of the most prominent Catholic families of the city and suburbs, who for "Sweet Charity's sake" will organize parties to assemble on that night and give to the occasion its full measure of social success.

SOMERVILLE GUILD ELECTS ITS OFFICERS.

At the recent meeting of St. Joseph's Guild, Somerville, the following officers were elected: Miss John T. Connor, president; Miss Marcella Eberle, vice-president; Miss Isabel Brine, treasurer; Mrs. Ruth Stankard, secretary; Miss Mary Cronin, recording secretary; Miss Margaret Gill, financial secretary. Mrs. Katherine Muldoon, doorkeeper, and Miss Francis Kelley, warden.

EATING MEAT REGULAR CLOGS THE KIDNEYS, THEN YOUR BACK HURTS

Flush your Kidneys occasionally with a tablespoonful of Salts to avoid danger.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, sore joints, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel so ache or pain in the kidney region get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush the clogs and kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Cardinal to Be Chief Guest

The seventh annual concert and ball of the Cathedral Young Men's Catholic Association will be held in Tremont Temple Hall, Monday evening, January 19. Cardinal O'Connell has been invited to be the special guest of the association.

A TRIP TO PANAMA FOR 98 CENTS

The BOSTON AMERICAN will take you over every foot of the ground; show you the latest and greatest achievement—The Panama Canal—will bare to your vision the intrigue, wars and revolutions of four centuries. Willis J. Abbot will personally conduct you on this tour of thrills and exciting incidents. Buccaneers and pirates will be your companions in the early stages; then there will be revealed to you the clashing of civilization and savage, the warring encounters of Spain, Frances and England in their various attempts to gain control of this tropical isthmus.

All this is of the most compelling interest to you as a thinking American. You want to know the incidents and the story which led up to the last of the scores of revolutions which have shaken Panama.

The money spent by our government in building The Panama Canal represents $4.00 for each man, woman and child in this great nation. YOUR MONEY HAS ACTUALLY GONE INTO IT. Therefore YOU are a part owner. It hits YOUR pocketbook. The Canal will help you earn more, because it directly or indirectly increases the gross profits of your business or your employer. It will save money for YOU—it will make the dollars you expend go farther, because of the millions upon millions of dollars annually saved in ocean freight charges, thereby reducing the prices of the things YOU buy.

Boston American Presentation

The Boston American is one of an 800 newspaper combination which has been formed to take an enormous edition and to supply their readers with the most comprehensive book yet published on the Panama subject.

Exceptional terms of distribution have been made possible as a result of this stupendous purchase. This remarkable book can be had from the Boston American at the bare cost of advertising and distribution.

We firmly believe that every copy placed in the hands of our readers will result in making new and grateful friends. We are certain that you will be so well pleased and altogether satisfied with this book that it will make you a still better friend of the Boston American. Through you we will secure new subscribers, because you will show this book to others, and be so enthusiastic that they will also want these books. This is only one of the many benefits we try to confer on our readers from time to time.

Unparalleled Engineering FEAT

The Panama Canal will prove the most vital factor to the American people in war and peace. It promises to do more than any other one thing to promote and protect the commerce and prosperity of the American nation, and to revolutionize the world's shipping.

It reduces by 7,000 miles the distance between Europe and the Pacific Coast of America and the Orient, saving millions of miles of travel and millions of hours annually. The incalculable saving on freights will result in reduced prices of commodities to the people of all the earth.

Few realize the enormous significance of the canal, and that the results were attained by the

HUGE EXPENDITURE OF MORE THAN $400,000,000.00

The United States is justly vain over this audacious feat. Every true American heart throbs with pride at the final accomplishment of this seemingly insurmountable task.

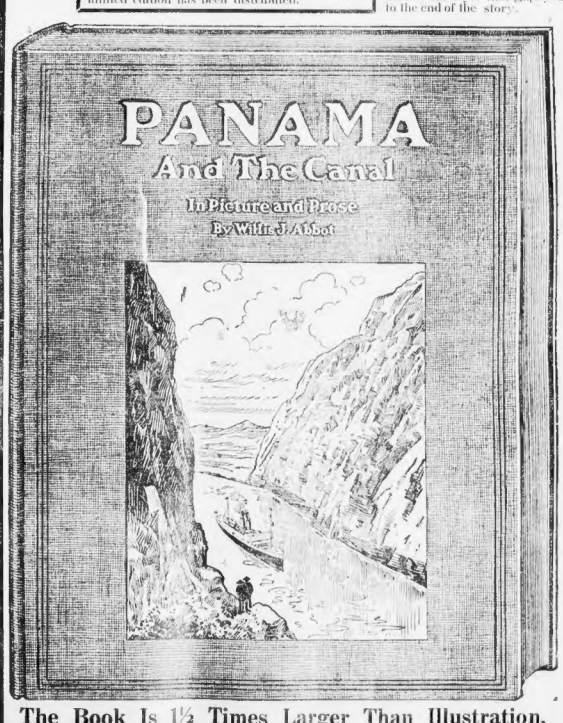
A Wonderful Scenic History

is furnished on Panama and the Canal by that well known writer on international subjects, books of history and travel, Mr. Willis J. Abbot. He has collected the complete history of that queer, interesting country, Panama. He tells all about the building of the great canal, costing America more than $400,000,000. He gives a wealth of historical data never before presented to the public. The result is a charming heart interest story, told in a chatty, around-the-fireside style that grips you from the opening chapter and holds attention to the end of the story.



The Book Is 1½ Times Larger Than Illustration.

644 Photographic Illustrations

The hundreds of beautiful photographs illustrating the text were taken by special staff photographers. There are scores of unique pictures, taken far from the usual lines of travel frequented by camera men. Every page of the text has its accompanying photographic illustrations.

16 Beautiful Water Colors

In addition to the photographs there are 16 full page reproductions from water color studies of Panama scenes, painted on the spot by that prominent artist, E. J. Read. Each picture is a veritable riot of tropical coloring, and a masterpiece of the printer's art.

Panama and the Canal in Picture and Prose is printed from new, large, easy-to-read type on specially made paper. It is bound in tropical red vellum cloth. The title is stamped in gold. The cover is finished with an inlaid panel reproduction in colors of the Culebra Cut from a painting by the well known artist, Gordon Grant.

PRINCE MIRKO SENDS BALKAN MESSAGE TO U.S.

Son of Montenegrin King Asks N. Y. American to Express Good Will and Admiration.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—Prince Mirko, second son of King Nicholas of Montenegro, has requested the Boston AMERICAN to transmit to the people of that country a message expressing his admiration for the American nation.

His Royal Highness, who is staying in Paris for a few days, en route to London, is a rapper young man, and although not to the legal stamping in perfect dignity, displays an entire absence of royal reserve.

In a cordial conversation with the Boston AMERICAN correspondent, lasting a quarter of an hour, the prince said:

"We have long desired to express publicly the unbounded admiration I feel for the great American people. As a matter of fact, the King and I feels for the great American people. As a matter of fact, the King and I feels for the great American people. As a matter of fact, the King and I feels
